County health official resigns

Chief officer Nichole Quick becomes latest to leave the agency Monday as 93 new coronavirus cases and 8 more deaths are reported.

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Orange County's chief health officer, Nichole Quick, resigned Monday, making her the third high-ranking health-care executive to leave the county agency as the pandemic continues.

Her resignation follows the departure of David Souleles, who was the county's deputy agency director of public health services, and Richard Sanchez, who was the director of the county's healthcare agency.

After issuing a controversial order that required people to wear cloth face coverings while in public, Quick received immediate pushback from residents and elected officials on the call for widespread use of face coverings. Orange County Sheriff's Department officials said in May that Quick had received several threats since issuance of the order and expressed concern for her safety.

The department subsequently provided Quick a security detail after she received what Orange County Board of Supervisors Chairwoman Michelle Steel called a death threat at a recent county

Options grow at most city parks in Costa Mesa

BY SARA CARDINE

Individuals and members of the same household may now officially sit, catch their breaths and even enjoy picnics at Costa Mesa parks, after city officials recently expanded its list of activities permitted at city-owned parks.

Closed to the visiting public in March in response to a growing coronavirus pandemic, select parks began reopening in late April and early May to walking/jogging, bicycling and other pass-through uses.

Visitors, however, were still prohibited from stopping, sitting or engaging in public gatherings, in accordance with state guidelines and protocols.

'80, to us, is just a number'

Huntington Beach residents Bob Chesney, 80, and Nancy Van der Plas, 81, refused to let COVID-19 keep them from starting their life together and married on Saturday night.

BY MATT SZABO

Love found a way for Bob and Nancy Chesney of Huntington Beach.

"Getting older isn't always so bad," Nancy said, smiling at her new husband sitting to her right. "You don't have to sit in a rocking chair just because you're 80. I don't even own one. Eighty, to us, is just a number."

Bob, 80, and Nancy, 81, refused to let age and COVID-19 be obstacles. The Huntington Beach residents got married Saturday night at Nancy's townhouse in Surf City.

About 40 guests came to the wedding, while 40 more watched via Zoom. Face masks and hand sanitizer, as well as social distancing, were the order of the day.

"We made it very clear," said Bob Chesney, who still works as a video producer. "If you want to come, you're welcome. If you don't, watch it on Zoom."

None of the precautions seemed to matter, however, when Nancy came down the stairs in her wedding dress to the music of "I Can't Stop Falling In Love With You," performed by Andrea Bocelli.

Nancy, formerly known as Nancy Van der Plas, joked that she robbed the cradle by marrying Bob. Each had each been married twice before. They met at Shepherd's Grove Presbyterian Church in Irvine in February 2018 and gradually got to know each other.

For close to a year, they would sit close to each other in church but not communicate. Bob would sit with his sister, Regina, and Nancy wasn't sure if that was his wife. Either way, he didn't make a move.

"At our age, you kind of want to pack it in," Bob said. "I did,

Peaceful Black Lives Matter protest closes out busy weekend in Huntington Beach

BY MATT SZABO

A peaceful Black Lives Matter protest was held Sunday afternoon in front of the Huntington Beach Police Department as part of a busy weekend of protests in Surf City.

About 200 protesters attended the Civic Center rally, which featured speakers including Rep. Harley Rouda and former Mixed Martial Arts star Chuck Liddell.

Huntington Beach resident Randy Wright, 30, was one of the organizers of the three-hour event. He said there was a police presence at the protest, but they kept their distance and no counterprotesters were present.

"It was a lot of local Huntington Beach residents, and everyone there was really positive," Wright said. "People came up to me the whole time afterward and were saying, 'Hey, how we can be involved? We want to be a part of making Huntington Beach a place for everybody.' It was just really great to see."

Huntington Beach Police Department spokeswoman Angie Bennett said that no arrests or incidents took place Sunday at the Civic Center protest or another Black Lives Matter protest at Huntington Beach Pier.

Nine arrests were made Saturday during another protest at the pier, which did feature counterprotesters.

There was also a paddle out Saturday morning on the north side of the pier in honor of George Floyd, the Black man who died in Minneapolis on May 25 after a video showed a white police officer kneeling on his neck for nearly 9 minutes.

Officer Derek Chauvin has been charged with second-degree murder and second-degree manslaughter, and three other officers on the scene have been charged with aiding and abetting.

Huntington Beach High's Sophia Cendro ready for emergencies

BY MATT SZABO

Sophia Cendro loves being at the beach.

She likes to surf, but she also gets paid to be there as a Huntington Beach city lifeguard.

Since the coronavirus pandemic hit, the 18-year-old Huntington Beach High School senior has been picking up shifts on the sand.

"I want to stay here as long as I can," she said. "I love this job."

Cendro spent four years in the city's junior lifeguard program before becoming a certified lifeguard as a sophomore in 2018. She said she hopes to be promoted to Lifeguard II this summer. To that end, she took night classes last fall in pursuit of her Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) certification.

"I think that's what's gotten her through this [pandemic] — working and being down at the pier," said Cendro's mother, Wendy. "She's been there during a lot of the protesting, working the beach and just keeping people safe. She's doing what she loves during this time and is able to tell people about the distancing. She's being a representative of how to get through this COVID-19."

The ocean was closed for a one-block stretch in Laguna Beach on Monday due to a 600-gallon raw sewage spill, the Orange County Health Care Agency said.

The Orange County Health Care Agency's Environmental Health Division closed the ocean water between Sleepy Hollow Lane and Cleo Street for swimming, surfing and diving. Ocean water will be closed to water-contact sports until the results of follow-up water-quality monitoring meet acceptable standards, the agency announced. For information on Orange County ocean, bay or harbor postings and closures, call (714) 443-6400 or visit OCBeachInfo.com. — Matt Szabo

Newport Beach Film Festival sets opening night for Aug. 6

The pandemic-postponed Newport Beach Film Festival is set to return Aug. 6 through 20, organizers announced Tuesday.

The festival, now in its 21st year, will kick off with the world premiere of the documentary "A Life of Endless Summers: The Bruce Brown Story" in all seven theaters at the Lot at Fashion Island. The film, by Brown's eldest son, Dana, is a tribute to the man behind the iconic 1965 surf documentary "The Endless Summer" and the Oscar-nominally scheduled for late April but delayed because of the coronavirus. Organizers will continue to take precautions, including physical distancing, no-contact temperature checks for attendees, single-use food containers, sanitizing stations and thorough cleaning. All screenings will be held at the Lot multiplex, 401 Newport Center Drive. Opening night screening starts at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 6. District Board of Trustees, also spoke at Sunday's Civic Center protest and explained why.

"The lives of my African-American students matter to me," said Clayton-Tarvin, who teaches in Cerritos. "I know that there are people in the community that might offend, and I'm not sure why ... Everybody deserves a right to breathe. We're in the year 2020; I can't believe this conversation is having to happen again. But it does have to happen because people are not being treated fairly."

Businesses in downtown Huntington Beach again prepared for the worst with the scheduled protests rolling in.

Many boarded up their windows for the second straight weekend, but no looting was reported.

Huntington Beach City Attorney Michael Gates posted a picture on his Facebook on Thursday, a prayer seeking protection for the city's citizens, businesses and police officers.

However, a picture accompanying the post featuring St. Michael, who appears white, with his foot on the head of Satan, who appears to have dark skin, drew criticism.

Gates, who did not return messages Monday, changed the picture to St. Michael holding the hand of a child. On Saturday night, he made another post praising Huntington Beach police officers and community members for "allowing folks to protest, while also maintaining peace and order, which protected not only the 1st Amendment, but also our community and businesses."

weeks. On Sunday night, members of the Minneapolis City Council said they intend to dismantle the city's police department.

On Monday, Democrats in the House of Representatives announced a bill that would, among other things, make it easier to sue police officers for misconduct in civil court and prosecute them for criminal behavior, as well as prohibiting the use of chokeholds and certain no-knock warrants.

"The community is risking their life in the middle of a pandemic to make a statement," said Aaron McCall, a Costa Mesa resident and activist who spoke at Sunday's protest in Huntington Beach.

"That statement is that we do not want any more police violence. The elected officials who represent the people, instead of an ideology, are hearing that and trying to step up to the plate."

anyway ... It's the old song, 'A man chases a woman until she catches him.' She sure did. Lucky me."

Nancy and her church friend, Linda Carl, finally found out that Bob was, in fact, single.

"One day, we got together after church, and we looked on Facebook to see if we could find out some information about him," Carl said. "That was kind of funny, because neither Nancy nor I are really versed in technology. We saw a picture of him and Regina on Facebook, and we saw that it was his sister."

Another friend of Nancy's, Susan Dawson, introduced the two of them one day after church.

Bob and Nancy quickly hit it off. Despite their age, both liked to go out on the town and attend concerts and performances. Together they run Nancy's Cabaret, a four-person review that performs Broadway classics.

theater," Bob said. "It really became fun. The big breakthrough was that I found out she's a big Andre Rieu fan, as I am."

Bob invited her to see the Dutch violinist and composer in Philadelphia that September. Last year, he gave her a ring.

A formal engagement happened this year, and the couple settled on June 6 for a date. They decided to keep it, despite any coronavirus concerns and despite any extra efforts needed in planning.

They got their marriage license in the parking lot of the Honda Center because the courts were closed.

They also had to cancel their honeymoon in Europe.

"Everything along the way was a challenge — the rings, the dress, the planning," Nancy said. "Everything was closed. We had to be creative along the way."

Nancy, who works as an event consultant and coordinator, was up to the challenge.

When the big day came Saturday, she got the surprise of her son Kevin, who recently turned 50, attending the wedding. Kevin has a health issue unrelated to the coronavirus, she said.

Nancy said her twin granddaughters helped guide the ceremony, which went off without any major hitch.

"One of our guests was leaving, and she said, 'Name your first daughter after me,'" Bob said. "I thought that was great."

The newlyweds are able to joke about their age. They watch their diet and they both enjoy walking, though Bob joked that exercise fascinates him and he "could watch it for hours."

"In age, we're 80," Nancy said, before pointing at her head. "In here, we don't feel that way. It's not like we're trying to be younger. It's just how we think."

"We love life, and we love each other. There's so much for us to do, and we plan to do it."

on Friday, individuals and those who live in the same household may now sit, read and picnic at most parks, as long as they wear face coverings and maintain 6 feet of physical distance from people living in other households.

Director of Parks and Community Services Yvette Aguilar said the relaxation of the rules applies to most of the 30 park facilities operated and maintained by the city. Certain portions of Fairview Park, along with the city's Skate Park and Dog Park, will remain closed.

Park amenities, facilities and other "touch points" — such as playgrounds, restrooms, picnic shelter areas and sports courts — will also remain closed to the public until further notice. Pet owners are asked to keep their dogs on leashes while visiting parks.

Aguilar said the decision to expand park uses was made with input from the city manager and city attorney's offices, Costa Mesa's Parks & Community Services Department and feedback from the City Council's Parks, Arts and Community Services Commission.

Costa Mesa officials on Friday eased restrictions on city-owned park use, to allow families or people within a single household to sit, recreate and picnic together. TeWinkle Park is shown in a view looking east.

"We are monitoring the phased reopening plans from the state and county level and will adhere to that guidance as appropriate and applicable," Aguilar said by email. "The goal is to lift restrictions in a manner that's consistent with local and state public health official guidance."

Costa Mesa City Councilwoman Sandy Genis, who's repeatedly advocated for reopening park lands for the mental health benefits they provide, said she's pleased renters and families without their own yards will have places to recreate.

"Imagine being in a small apartment with no air-conditioner and not being able to go to a park," Genis said Monday, as daytime temperatures reached 90 degrees. "Now, you can go to Victoria [Vista] Park, where I think there's enough room for people to space out and catch a breeze. On a day like today, that's a perfect place to be."

Cendro developed the Trauma For Teachers training as a senior, drawing from her lifeguard training. The program took months to develop after she approached her supervisor, Doug Leach, a marine safety officer for the city of Huntington Beach.

In January, about 200 members of Huntington Beach High faculty and staff learned the basics of bleed control and CPR.

"She was able to take her idea and put it into action, coordinating a bunch of different entities with the Fire Department, paramedics and working with the local Police Department, not to mention her school district," Leach said.

"Absolutely, those are leadership qualities. That's an efficient leader, right, when you can get everyone in the same room talking to each other.

"From what I've seen of her, anything she does, she does with passion. She puts a lot of effort into it. She's where the rubber meets the road; she gets things done."

Cendro, who is headed to the University of Hawaii next year to study nursing, said that putting the training together was a special experience. Being in the Connections club on campus, advised by teacher Rose Haunreiter, for three years has also been meaningful. There, Cendro has worked with students who have social cognition issues, following hours of training.

"She's phenomenal," said Haunreiter, who has been a teacher at the school for more than 30 years. "She's one of the most intelligent, passionate individuals. She doesn't just talk, but is full of action ... She's probably one of the most incredible young ladies I've ever worked with."

Cendro is excited to graduate; Huntington Beach is holding a drive-through graduation on Wednesday.

Even with her extracurricular activities, she has maintained a 4.27 weighted grade-point average for the Oilers.

Cendro said she is following in the footsteps of her older sisters, both of whom also graduated from Huntington Beach High.

Both attend USC, where Samantha is a senior studying aerospace engineering and Stephanie is a junior studying public policy and business.

Cendro was recently honored in a virtual ceremony as this year's Distinguished Oiler Award winner. She said both her older sisters were finalists for the award, which is chosen by staff, as well.

"That was really special for me and my family," Cendro said. "It was really special for all three of us to have made it to the top five ... I don't know if they hear it enough, but I'm so thankful for my family."

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: MASATSUGU YOSHIDA, aka MATT YOSHIDA

30-2020-01132378-PR-PW-CJC To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of: MASATSUGU YOSHIDA, aka MATT YOSHIDA

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by JENNI YOSHIDA SMITH in the Superior Court of California, County of ORANGE.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that JENNI YOSHIDA SMITH be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Aug 05, 2020 at 11:00 a.m. in Dept. C6 located at 700 CIVIC CENTER DRIVE WEST, SANTA ANA, CA 92701

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
