PGA TOUR CHAMPIONS

Langer eyes record as Hoag Classic returns to N.B.

Bernhard Langer, 65, enters next week's event tied for the most PGA Tour Champions wins.

BY MATT SZABO

He may now be 65 years old, but Bernhard Langer keeps going like a well-oiled machine in PGA Tour Champions events.

The same could be said of the Hoag Classic at Newport Beach Country Club.

Orange County's only PGA Tour event returns next week, with the three-day tournament happening March 17 through 19.

As usual, Newport Beach is expecting a star-studded field for the Hoag Classic, which features Hoag Health System as the title sponsor and beneficiary. Top names like Jim Furyk, Ernie Els, John Daly and Newport Beach resident Fred Couples are also expected to participate.

"The field's ridiculous," tournament executive director Jeff Purser said. "I talked to the Champions Tour president [Tuesday] and he said he thinks it will be the best field of the entire year, including majors, because the majors have a very different qualifying set than we do. It's pretty exciting to have it, that's for sure."

World Golf Hall of Fame member Retief Goosen is the defending tournament champion, but Langer also draws plenty of attention. He won the tournament in 2008, when it was known as the Toshiba Classic, and comes to Newport Beach this time around with a record-tying 45 Champions Tour wins after capturing the Chubb Classic in Naples, Fla. last month.

Another rainstorm came through the area Friday evening in what has continued to be the wettest winter in Southern California in recent memory.

In contrast to the heavy rainfall experienced in Central and Northern California, Orange County was expected to receive a relatively modest half an inch to an inch of precipitation between Friday evening and Saturday morning.

Still, that didn't keep people from worrying

Laguna Beach held its sixth annual Arbor Day celebration in a community gathering event at Moulton Meadows Park Thursday afternoon.

Attendees enjoyed live music, plant giveaways, composting demonstrations, and some of the participants planted a native tree.

Animal shelter donation campaign launched

As the opening of the Newport Beach Animal Shelter nears, about $50K is left to be raised to finish construction.

BY LILLY NGUYEN

The Newport Beach Animal Shelter is in the last stretch of fundraising and construction, according to the Friends of the Newport Beach Animal Shelter, which is financing the entire project, from the purchase of the land through seeing the facility built.

About $50,000 remains to completely finish out the shelter, which broke ground in January of last year after members of the organization raised $2.9 million to realize their vision.

The shelter will be the first permanent such facility in Newport Beach, as the city previously contracted out its services to providers, including the Orange County Humane Society.

Its animal control work continues to operate out of an existing residential kennel on Riverside Drive, though operations are expected to move to the new shelter

Girl Scouts of O.C. host walk, festival for 111th anniversary

BY ERIC LICAS

Girl Scouts of Orange County invite scouts and non-scouts alike to celebrate their 111th anniversary with a 5K walk and festival at Wild Rivers in Irvine Sunday.

The first Trefoil Trot starts at 7:30 a.m., and kids who take part earn a medal and a T-shirt. Those who'd like to participate but haven't yet registered should arrive early. They'll be able to accommodate about 1,200 people, and 600 had signed up as of Friday.

A shorter walk the Girl Scouts are calling the "Daisy Dash" will also be held for younger kids and toddlers. Those who skip the Sunday morning jog are still welcome to a festival titled "Camp Cooldown," which runs from 9 a.m. to noon. The theme of its attractions are the "four pillars" of the Girl Scouts: entrepreneurship, life skills, S.T.E.M. and the outdoors, Girl Scouts of Orange County Chief Executive Vikki Shepp said.

Eventgoers will get a chance to create Lego race cars, lanyards and binary code bracelets. Booths will also feature ax throwing, face painting, gardening and music.

There will be plenty of cookies on sale, and this may be one of the last chances people get to stock up on the ever-popular Thin Mints, Caramel DeLites, Tagalongs and other varieties of the iconic sweets.

The Trefoil Trot is an opportunity for kids and their families who might want to join the Girl Scouts to learn more about them. Shepp hopes the event also attracts supporters from the business community who might consider sponsoring the organization.

"We started to toss around this idea of what can we do where the public could see that we're more than cookies because we know that's our reputation, which we don't mind, but we'd like people to know more than that," Shepp said. The last day of cookie sales, March 12, also marks the 111th anniversary of the Girl Scouts. For generations, they have made it their mission to enrich girls' lives and prepare to lead them to brighter futures. Research has shown that kids who join the group are more likely to graduate from college and become civically engaged as adults, Shepp said.

The Girl Scouts were founded in Savannah, Ga. by Juliette "Daisy" Gordon Low in 1912, and began with a troop of just 18 girls. Today, the organization boasts around 1.7 million members.

just down the street once the facility is complete.

"Our original mission was to support lost and displaced animals in our community," Jonathan Langford, FONBAS president and a newly appointed planning commissioner, said in a statement announcing the campaign.

"We are very pleased to have exceeded expectations and to be in the last stage of a capital campaign to establish a permanent animal shelter in our city," Langford said.

FONBAS gifted the 1,500-square-foot shelter to the city in December and is expected to begin operations soon. Council members thanked the FONBAS and contributors for their efforts. The shelter will have a 750-square-foot kennel, a frontyard greeting area and a rear yard for exercise.

As of Friday afternoon, about $1,545 had been raised in the GoFundMe effort, which can be found at gofund.me/e83fe99d. Donations of over $5,000 will be included on the shelter's permanent donor wall.

President of the Richard Nixon Foundation addresses full house

How often do you catch a video clip on television of a reporter doing a “man on the street” segment asking a random person, “Who was the first president of the United States?” and the answer comes back with the wrong name? It is astounding how often we witness this. What does this say about education in America?

Recently, Jim Byron, president and chief executive of the Richard Nixon Foundation, addressed a full house at the Balboa Island Museum, Newport Beach as part of the museum’s community guest speaker series. Byron’s topic was “American Civics 101: How Presidential Libraries Teach What the Education System Won’t.”

The upbeat evening event created serious conversation on issues impacting Newport-Mesa families directly. How many high school kids today would be able to share anything about Nixon, a former president of the U.S.? Sadly, not many.

Byron, with the fresh looks of a teen himself, has in fact been associated with the Nixon Foundation for some 15 years since graduating from Chapman University with a degree in business and history. As a protégé of mentor and syndicated conservative talk-host Hugh Hewitt, Byron has risen through the foundation ranks and is also the author of “A President Comes Home,” the official Nixon Library commemorative book and history of the Nixon Presidential Library.

Balboa Island Museum, named in 2023 as one of L.A. Times’ “Best Museums” is led by founder and chief executive Shirley Pepys, who introduced Byron to the local audience. Making the event possible, joining Pepys, and team was Brenda St. Hilarie from the foundation.

Front and center for the lecture series were special guests Alex and Barbara Bowie, Gary Byron, Dalal Momta, Lorraine Leavitt, George Eastman, Robyn Grant, Wayne Graveline, Patricia Huston, Judy Jones and Bob Dennerline. Also in the crowd were Charlie Vandervort, Michelle Lovenduski, Omar Ramos, James Stentz, Robert Ash and Balboa Island Museum Executive Director Tiffany Pepys Hoey.

Speaker events planned for March at Balboa Island Museum will feature the Theodore Robins Ford Family Legacy, honoring a century-long automotive history on the Orange Coast, as well as a salute to our local veterans, honoring those who served in Vietnam with a pinning ceremony set for March 29.

On April 14, Dr. Sandra Morgan will speak and sign her book, “Ending Human Trafficking,” sharing news of the crisis here in the O.C. as well as around the globe.

To learn more about Balboa Island Museum visit balboaislandmuseum.org. All are welcome to attend the upcoming speaker events at no charge. Call the museum at (949) 675-

TROJAN TERRITORY

USC’s admired Athletic Director Mike Bohn made a trip south on the 405 to join alumni and friends of the Trojan League of Orange County for a reception at Newport Harbor Yacht Club, Newport Beach billed as “Game Day by the Bay.” An overflow crowd came to raise scholarship funds for O.C. students headed to USC in the fall.

Co-chaired by Kathy May and Teri Wilhelm, support for the themed evening — which featured appropriate game day food like chili coliseum dogs, hamburgers and BBQ chicken — came from a dedicated committee that included Jill Aschieris, Kim Bernatz, Sally Anderson, Lisa Grundy Johnson, Holly Anderson, Penny McMahon, Kathy Koll Hancock, Diane Heimstaedt and Paula Cargasacchi.

As tradition requires, the event opened with the Trojan Marching Band performing “Spirit of Troy” with USC song girls demanding the crowd to “Fight On.” Bohn shared an insider’s perspective on the USC football program as well as other collegiate initiatives.

Recently named the 2021-22 Football Athletics Subdivision (NACDA) Athletics Director of the Year, Bohn came to USC in 2019 with some 35 years of collegiate athletic administration background. He is credited with the major turnaround for USC football as well as success in other Division 1 sports for men and women.

Major sponsors of the Trojan “Game Day” were Ed and Melanie Fitch, Rod and Liz Maxson, Graham and Anne Tingler, Jeff and Stacey Stone. Also sponsoring were Lido House Hotel, Newport Beach and VEA Newport Beach, among many others.

A SALUTE TO VETERANS

More than 500 active-duty Camp Pendleton Marines and other U.S. vets came together for a Super Bowl party last month hosted by the generous and patriotic Gary and Julie Crisp of Costa Mesa-based Crisp Imaging.

The big event unfolded Super Bowl Sunday at Legion Post 291, Newport Beach. It was the 12th such outing sponsored by Crisp Imaging and other donors including title sponsor Stanley W. Ekstrom Foundation and platinum sponsor Monster Energy. Also supporting the vets were Balboa Bay Resort, Coca-Cola, Burnham Ward Properties and Bank of the West, to list a very partial roster of financial support.

A check for $25,000 was presented to the Dana Point 5th Marine Regiment Support Group with the mission of providing support for the 5th MAR Marines and Sailors deployed from and stationed at Camp Pendleton and their families.

Langer, the oldest tournament winner in tour history, is currently tied with Hale Irwin for most titles. But the German could have the record all to himself if he can win again in Newport. Only three players have won the Hoag Classic twice:

Irwin (1998 and 2002), Jay Haas (2007 and 2016) and Couples (2010 and 2014).

"He's on the cusp," Purser said. "It would be pretty exciting for him to pass that threshold here. Certainly it's a golf course he's capable of winning on."

Paul Goydos, a Long Beach native who now lives in Dove Canyon, has a pair of top-10 finishes at the Hoag Classic. The 58-year-old enjoys the benefits of a close-by tournament, but said Newport Beach Country Club can be challenging.

"If things start well, I tend to play well there," he said. "When things get a little off-track, I tend to really struggle. I think you need to manage your expectations a little bit. It's one of those golf courses where no matter what you shoot, you feel like you should have shot a few shots lower, but no one ever does. You need to really pay attention or you can make mistakes, and they tend to bite you there."

David Toms, 56, earned his third PGA Tour Champions win by capturing the Colouard Classic tournament last week in Arizona. He will look to keep up his hot play in the early season at the Hoag Classic.

"I enjoy that part of the country," Toms said. "My dad lived in Fullerton when I was in high school, so I always enjoy coming back to that area. They put on a good show. Obviously Hoag is big in that community, and they run a really nice event."

Tournament week starts with a private event, the Hoag Classic Hall of Fame Community Breakfast, on Tuesday morning at VEA Newport Beach Resort & Spa. Couples is the featured speaker.

The Legends Pro-Am, which is open to the public, takes place Wednesday and Thursday before the tournament itself starts Friday. Saturday is Military Appreciation Day, and Sunday is Student Day.

Langer will be one of the more popular players out on the course, and for good reason.

"When he won a couple of weeks ago at Naples, we were tied for the lead after the first round," Goydos said. "I played with him the second day, and Bernhard being Bernhard, he doesn't really make mistakes. He keeps himself in everything, never really gets too out of position. He doesn't look overly impressive, he just beats you by three or four shots every round. He just doesn't ever beat himself."

"He's always in a position where he's really not going to hurt himself too much. That's hard to do over a tournament, let alone over 15 years."

Mifepristone ban would affect patients' rights in Orange County

A Texas federal court decision in the coming weeks could ban the use of mifepristone, a safe and common abortion drug that has been widely used for over 20 years. What many people here do not realize is that the Texas judge's dangerous and unscientific position will limit Californians' access to safe abortion care — and possibly to other lifesaving treatments.

Nationwide, 50% of abortions are done with medication, but here in Orange County, it's closer to 80%. As a doctor who cares for pregnant people across Orange County, I have seen firsthand what having access to safe, timely abortion care can mean to patients. Everyone should have the ability to make decisions about their own reproductive lives and futures, including the method of abortion that works best for their circumstances.

Mifepristone was approved by the FDA over 20 years ago and has a stellar safety rating — over 99%. This attack on mifepristone is strictly politically motivated and clearly shows that overturning Roe vs. Wade wasn't enough for anti-abortion extremists who want to completely eradicate access.

Our doors at Planned Parenthood of Orange & San Bernardino Counties are open, and we will provide the best treatment for any patient we see. But the consequences of this case go beyond access to one drug. It threatens the FDA's authority over the approval process for medications and could have far-reaching consequences for patients' access to other FDA-approved medications — and that affects everyone, not just those who are pregnant.

Pacaso benefits Newport Beach

The Newport Beach City Council has recently taken up the issue of co-ownership. As a Newport Beach resident of 20-plus years and Pacaso executive, I feel compelled to share my perspective on what co-ownership means for our community.

I decided to move to Newport Beach because few other places offer such an incredible combination of environment and community. My wife and I love being able to raise our children in Newport. Our family is heavily involved in local sports and we spend a lot of our time in the local parks and beaches with our friends, kids' teammates and have loved getting to know our fellow community members. I firmly believe Pacaso and co-ownership will help us preserve what we love about Newport Beach by more effectively incorporating second home owners into our community.

HOW TO GET PUBLISHED

Send an email to erik.haugli@latimes.com and include your full name, hometown and phone number (for verification purposes) with your submission. All letters should be kept to 350 words or less and address local issues and events. The Daily Pilot reserves the right to edit all accepted submissions for clarity, accuracy and length.

It's no secret that the pandemic created unprecedented demand for second homes in destination communities like Newport Beach. This demand causes a problem because the average second home sits empty for a majority of the year. As more homes become second homes, there are fewer full-time residents, and the existing character of a community changes. It's a problem because the housing market becomes unsustainable as inventory is set aside for people who rarely visit.

Pacaso offers one solution. Through co-ownership, we take up to eight second home buyers and put them into one home. Those buyers were looking for single-family homes in the community. Instead, they share one luxury home.

Co-ownership is not new. It is an established practice. Pacaso is modernizing the process and bringing together buyers. Otherwise these homes operate similar to any other co-owned home, which are common in Newport Beach.

After the home is sold, Pacaso supports owners as a property manager and retains no ownership in the home. Owners hold 100% of the home collectively.

Pacaso owners have a vested interest in the home and the community as many of them have family that live in the area, run local businesses nearby their homes or have been visiting the community for years, often decades. These owners look forward to returning and cherish the destination on a deeper level, opposed to those who visit for a weekend getaway in a short-term rental, move on and perhaps never return. Pacaso owners are responsible families that abide by local ordinances and are committed to being good neighbors by following a code of conduct that supports a high quality of life in the neighborhood where they live. These policies restrict noise, prohibit short-term rentals in their homes, and regulate parking and trash.

about what might come after parts of a bluff collapsed in Newport Beach last weekend and a sinkhole appeared in Laguna Beach on Monday.

Residents and city officials alike kept an eye out for further losses. As of late Friday afternoon, however, no significant damages had been reported in coastal Orange County.

Other parts of California have been less lucky, with at least one individual reported to have died in Oakland after a roof collapsed at a coffee distribution warehouse Friday.

The National Weather Service has reported that the storms this weekend are to be considered dangerous in much of Central California and a state of emergency was declared by Gov. Gavin Newsom on Thursday to bolster relief efforts in 34 counties up and down the state.

National Weather Service meteorologist Samantha Connolly said a low pressure system is the cause of the rain this time as it draws in moisture from an atmospheric river to the west. It is expected to taper off by Saturday morning, though clouds are not expected to begin to clear up until Sunday afternoon.

"Definitely compared to the last few years, it's been a wet winter," Connolly said. "We've seen a lot of these low pressure systems moving in. We saw a lot of them in January, one in February and as we get into this storm here, it's ... [been] a very active pattern over the last few months. It's really a toss of the coin when you look at each individual year because some years can be really dry and some years, wet."

Winds are expected to be normal and temperatures consistent in the mid-to-low 50s. Connolly noted that Friday's storm in particular was actually somewhat warm in comparison to those that have swept through the region over the past few months.

In Fullerton, the National Weather Service has recorded about 14.3 inches of rain since Oct. 1, which compares to its typical average of around 9.7 inches. John Wayne Airport, also since Oct. 1, has recorded around 12.5 inches of rainfall this winter as compared to its typical 9.3 inches.

"It's definitely running above normal so far this year; that's a really good thing," Connolly said, adding that another storm is expected to come through next Tuesday and Wednesday on more or less the same scale as the rains this weekend.

tion about native plants and our open space, handing out free plants and giving the kids a chance to paint a rock or a flower pot. With the help of many Boys & Girls Club members wielding shovels, we planted a beautiful new tree.

Conservation, preservation and community garden groups were on hand to interact with attendees, providing opportunities for kids to learn more and possibly discover a new interest.

National Arbor Day is celebrated on the last Friday in April, but California has its own Arbor Day on March 7. Matthew Barker, the city arborist, shared why that is the case in an appearance this week on the Mornings with Ed Show on Laguna Beach radio station KX FM 104.7.

"March 7 is the birthday of Luther Burbank," Barker said. "He was, much like myself, a native New Englander who moved to California. He was a pioneer in plant genetics and plant genomics, where he made hundreds, if not thousands of varieties of fruits and vegetables, many of which we still use today. He developed, famously, the russet potato."

Show host Ed Steinfeld also asked Barker about the impact of wet weather as it pertains to the danger of trees falling over.

"I think after about an inch of rain, you don't have to worry about irrigating your gardens for about 72 hours," Barker added. "I think three or four days is probably nice for things to dry out, things to subside, but I was happy to see, even with the really severe weather we had, there weren't really too many limb or total tree failures, which was great to see."
