NMUSD hopefuls discuss issues at PTA forum

Event at Back Bay High School gives contenders running for three seats a chance to talk about backgrounds, plans.

BY SARA CARDINE

School safety, the pursuit of academic excellence and involving parents in the practices, policies and laws affecting their children's education framed a deep discussion Wednesday among seven candidates running for three seats on Newport-Mesa Unified School District's Board of Education.

A forum hosted by the Harbor Council PTA at Back Bay High School allowed a panel of Costa Mesa and Newport Beach residents — all of whom have or had children enrolled in the district — to convey their personal and professional qualifications in running for three districted seats in the Nov. 5 election.

Incumbents Leah Ersoylu (Area 1), Carol Crane (Area 3) and Krista Weigand (Area 6) seek second terms, having been elected in 2020, and each faces at least one challenger.

Robin Mensinger is squaring off against Ersoylu, whose district includes Early College High and schools in the Estancia High School zone. Crane's seat, which represents Eastbluff Elementary, Corona del Mar High School and Back Bay, is being contested by Philip Stemler.

Weigand, whose area includes Kaiser, Mariners, Newport Heights and Woodland elementary schools, is being challenged by Chris Kretzu and Amy Peters, the latter of whom placed second against Weigand in 2020.

After introductions and flash-card responses covering how long candidates have lived in their trustee areas (all indicated 10 years or more), how long they'd expect to spend each week on board duties (answers ranged from 10 to 20 hours) and whether they'd reviewed the latest district

Locals looked to instill a sense of community through dozens of service projects on Saturday for the third annual Love Laguna Beach event.

The day of community service had 160 volunteers signed up heading into the weekend, but organizers said they surpassed target participation levels in getting an estimated 250-plus people to help out with tasks around town.

Available projects included beach cleanups, beginning at Main Beach and branching out from there. There were also beautification efforts at community gardens, as well as

$150K police purchase meets mixed reactions

The Irvine Police Department bought a Tesla Cybertruck as a patrol vehicle in its D.A.R.E. program.

BY ERIC LICAS

Irvine Police unveiled a Tesla Cybertruck purchased to support their anti-substance abuse outreach on Tuesday, a day after a fifth recall was announced in the vehicle's first year of production.

The sharp-angled stainless steel vehicle cost $132,363 to purchase and $20,811 to outfit with a light bar, siren, custom graphics and other equipment. The price tag on a standard patrol vehicle is around $116,000, Irvine Police spokesman Kyle Oldoerp said.

"That car is expected to last three to four years as a patrol vehicle," Oldoperp said. "This [Cybertruck] is in the $150,000 range, but we expect it to last in our fleet for at least 10 years."

The Cybertruck can respond to calls for service, and as an off-road capable vehicle it may be useful for getting in and out of rough terrain in an emergency, Oldoerp said. But it wasn't meant to be used predominantly as a patrol car. Its main function is to promote the police department's Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) program at seminars and outreach events.

"When you have a Cybertruck roll up with D.A.R.E. graphics it's way different than having a marked police car that pulls up," Oldoerp said. "And that curiosity, that excitement, that interaction with the police officers, that's what we're really after."

The department has purchased numerous vehicles to attract attention to the D.A.R.E. program over the decades. These include a PT Cruiser and a lifted fourthgeneration Toyota Hilux pickup truck outfitted with off-road tires and yellow, red and pink racing graphics.

But over the years critics have questioned the effectiveness of such programs, especially in light

OC Pride parade, festival blaze brightly at county fairgrounds

BY SARA CARDINE

On a typical event day at the Orange County fairgrounds, what's happening inside the gates is much more vibrant and celebratory than the scene outside.

But that paradigm shifted Saturday as OC Pride's Blaze It Forward Parade made its way along the perimeter of the Costa Mesa complex and up to the entrance to kick off a daylong Colors of Strength Pride Festival taking place inside.

Hosted by the Santa Ana non-profit, the resplendent cavalcade featured LGBTQ+ residents and community members promoting messages of love, acceptance and empowerment in honor of Blaze Bernstein, a 19-year-old Lake Forest man killed in 2018 by a classmate in what's been prosecuted as a hate crime.

Bernstein's parents, Jeanne Pepper and Gideon Bernstein, served as grand marshals presiding over nearly 70 entries, ranging from the LGBT Center of Orange County and UC Irvine to the Orange County Gay Men's Chorus and Planned Parenthood.

Manny Muro, vice president of OC Pride, said the parade and its theme were a tribute to Bernstein's legacy and his parents' ef-

Rescue crew in H.B. extricates motorist from Talbert Marsh after crash

BY SARA CARDINE

Huntington Beach police and fire crews performed a water rescue Monday morning, after a vehicle traveling on Pacific Coast Highway crashed into the wetlands area of Talbert Marsh and became submerged in water, officials reported.

Police spokeswoman Jessica Cuchilla said first responders were called to the area near the juncture of PCH and Brookhurst Street at around 8:15 a.m. They arrived to find a black SUV occupied by a single adult male.

Assisted by lifeguards, officers worked to extricate the driver from the vehicle. The unidentified man was transported to a nearby hospital where he was treated for non-life-threatening injuries, Cuchilla confirmed.

Anti-Asian slurs painted on Dave Min's campaign signs in Surf City

BY ERIC LICAS

Signs promoting Dave Min's campaign for Congress were defaced in Huntington Beach with a derogatory term for members of the AAPI community in one of two cases of vandalism targeting the candidate, the state senator reported on Tuesday.

The racial slur was spray-painted on at least three signs advertising the Korean American's bid for a U.S. Congressional seat, as seen in a short video posted by his campaign on YouTube. The vandalism was reported shortly before noon near Newland Street and Slater Avenue, Huntington Beach Police spokeswoman Jessica Cuchilla said. As many as six signs were defaced, although not all of them had hate speech on them.

Investigators are looking into the matter as a possible hate crime, Cuchilla said. Police did not immediately describe any potential suspects and have asked anyone with information regarding the case to contact them.

Min did not explicitly name any possible perpetrator. But he did insinuate that whoever was responsible was at least influenced by the conservative MAGA movement closely associated with former President Donald Trump.

"Hate of any kind, directed against anyone, is unacceptable. Full stop,' Min said in a statement Tuesday. "But unfortunately, we have seen a sharp rise in hate in recent years due to the xenophobia and racism that have come to define Donald Trump's MAGA movement.'

Groups of demonstrators waving flags supporting "Trump 2024" are a recurring scene along Pacific Coast Highway near Huntington Beach Pier; Min noted one such rally took place the weekend before his signs were vandalized. And conservative members of the City Council have repeatedly clashed with liberals who accuse them of passing laws that make Huntington Beach less inclusive, particularly toward the LGBTQ+ community.

Mayor Gracey Van Der Mark responded to Min's comments by reiterating that no evidence pointing to any suspect has been made public so far. She accused Min of sowing division and "race baiting," noting that she has also been targeted by vandals.

"My signs were vandalized; my car windows were shot out; my kids' cars still have little pellets on them," Van Der Mark told the Daily Pilot in a brief phone call Tuesday. "Not once did I accuse anybody. Because the truth is that I didn't know who did it. I did think it was politically motivated, but I felt the responsible thing to do was to not accuse anyone."

More of Min's campaign signs were reported vandalized near Magnolia

Street and Mediterranean Drive at about 2 p.m., Cuchilla said. Witnesses described a suspect who was found nearby and ar-

The man arrested in connection with the second case of vandalism Tuesday was identified as 62-year-old Kevin Walker of Fountain Valley. It was not immediately clear whether he may have been involved with the racist language found earlier that afternoon.

budget (all affirmative), moderators pitched 10 round-robin questions to give panelists an opportunity to air their views and platforms.

When asked what inspired them to seek office, Kretzu, the father of an Ensign Intermediate seventhgrader, said his son's transifrom elementary tion school into a larger, older campus got him thinking about social-emotional health and the potentially negative influence of cellphones on campus.

Mensinger, a publicist, said she decided to run after hearing how dissatisfied parents had become with what they described as a lapse in schools' academic performance, while Stemler, a San Bernardino County deputy district attorney, cited a lack of transparency about district decisions and a diminished focus on educational success.

Peters said she was motivated after hearing about NMUSD's compliance with AB 1955, a state law prohibiting districts from notifying parents about students' preferred gender identity.

"I don't think we should be keeping that information from parents," she "The secrecy that's happening on school campuses drives a wedge between schools and parents and teachers and children."

Incumbents took a different view. Ersovlu said she first ran in 2020 on a platform of student health and wellness, after seeing evidence NMUSD wasn't complying with its own policies. She also pointed to a scarcity of electives at TeWinkle Middle School.

"It had 11 electives and other schools had 26 or 28," she said. "I just really think we needed to change that, and we did."

Weigand said COVID-19 restrictions inspired her to seek ways to get kids back in school as quickly as possible and cited school safety and individualized learning models as other motivating factors, while Crane listed academic achievement, facility improvements and whole child learning as her main priorities.

A question about how candidates, if elected, would balance their personal beliefs with the elected officials' sworn oath to uphold state and federal laws and mandates they might not agree with also drove a wedge between panelists.

Peters and Stemler indicated an interest in finding ways to challenge state laws that conflicted with dearly held local principles and values, particularly social and politically charged issues like AB 1955.

"The blizzard of state laws and regulations that are governing our schools are the reason why you need someone like me, who has experience in court and litigating and standing up for what's right," he said.

Ersoylu said she believed in keeping a clear line between conflicting personal beliefs and laws, while Mensinger backed a balanced approach that would allow officials to both uphold the law and ensure parent concerns were heard and considered.

Crane said the school board has the ability to determine how it will uphold a particular law or mandate and can create a solution that best meets everyone's needs. She cited the district's actions during the pandemic to create an instructional model would allow kids wishing to return to in-person learning as quickly as possible without abandoning virtual learning.

Weigand agreed that the district can make policies or a curriculum with its own local flavor.

"On the board, I have worked to take policies I may not have liked but figure out how we can make them and structure them in a way that still represents our values without breaking any laws.'

"When I was in school it was about drugs, tobacco, alcohol," Oldoerp said. "I know there's been a lot of questions, studies about the effectiveness of the program. But we're really proud to have a D.A.R.E. program and the program has really evolved. It's now about self esteem. It's about making good decisions. It's about anti-bullying. It's about making good life choices."

The D.A.R.E. Cybertruck was purchased at the start of the summer but officially went into service Tuesday. On Monday, Tesla announced a recall on the vehicles because of reports their rear-view cameras weren't switching on fast enough while backing up.

That's the fifth recall on Cybertrucks Tesla has issued in the first year of the vehicle's production. Other issues include failing windshield wipers, faulty accelerator pedals and exterior trim that could dislodge and become a hazard for other motorists.

Oldoerp said the police department is aware of the recalls and has had all of them sorted in a timely manner at a nearby Tesla service facility. No issues have been reported in the few days since it has gone into service.

Meanwhile, online reactions to the vehicle have been mixed, at best. As of Thursday evening a only a handful of over 250 commenters responding to a Facebook post unveiling the Cybertruck expressed support for the D.A.R.E. program and the purchase of the new vehicle. But numerous people described it as a "waste of money."

At least one commenter noted that the $150,000 price tag of the Tesla might have covered a police officer's annual salary. Several pointed out that Rivian is an Irvine-based manufacturer of EVs and suggested that purchasing one of its vehicles would support a local brand.

Gail Onodera, co-director of the children's ministry at Laguna Presbyterian and an organizer of Love Laguna Beach, said some found their way to the home of Skipper Carrillo, a longtime community member with special needs and an avid supporter of athletics at Laguna Beach High. Carrillo, known for his affinity for baseball terminology, has wished for many to "have a home run day," and participants hoped to return the favor by working to clear overgrown vegetation at his property.

"He's been so supportive of all the sports programs at the high school, wears his baseball uniform every day," Onodera said. "He's really cute, and so the community's just embraced him, and he's given back a lot — just with his support and presence. The kids love him, and so we cleaned up his house. Club of Laguna Beach and some public gardens. Several participants also made brunch for those staying in the Friendship Shelter.

"We had so many cool projects that connected so many people," Onodera said. "That was cool."

Two dozen projects were worked on during the day of community service. Organizers received more than $5,000 in donations to assist with the projects.

"We paid for all new sports equipment for the youth shelter to have and a bin to put it in," Onodera said of how the donations were put to use. "We helped pay for the garden at Top of the World Elementary, to redo it. Then we paid for all the supplies at the day laborers' location, so they didn't have to incur that cost."

Not all of the donations were cash. Odonera noted, for example, that the woman who oversaw the jewelry-making activity at Glennwood House donated the necessary supplies herself.

While the parade and festival had recently been held as part of an open-air event in Santa Ana, organizers were looking for a venue that would provide more safety and security for attendees. The OC Fair & Event Center had just the right size and infrastructure.

This year's celebration

featured Mexican trans influencer Wendy Guevara in her debut pride tour of the United States along with Vanessa Vanjie Mateo and Jessica Wild from "RuPaul's Drag Race."

Muro said the parade and festival aim to instill pride in and support for the LGBTQ+ community through live music, drag performances, art, community zones and workshops centered around activism and engagement.

"Pride is more than just a celebration," he said. "It's really about a movement that brings the community together and reminds us of the strength that we have."
