CLASS OF 2020 GRADUATION

STRENGTH AND RESILIENCE:

Los Amigos puts on a virtual graduation for seniors

BY ANDREW TURNER

Both students and staff agreed that an online graduation went beyond anything they could have imagined.

Certainly, it was not the commencement ceremony of their dreams, but the virtual graduation put on by Los Amigos High School and the Garden Grove Unified School District provided many of the heartwarming moments expected of such an oc-

Dr. Amy Avina, the principal of Los Amigos, acknowledged during the virtual livestream that many of her students have gone through struggles and urged them to not let those challenges define them.

"Do not carry these disappointments with you into the future as heavy burdens which turn into resentment," Avina said. "Instead, let these past few months and years shape you into warriors of strength

Working Wardrobes starts rebuilding effort

BY SARA CARDINE

Since a fire destroyed its Irvine headquarters in February, Working Wardrobes — a nonprofit that helps connect residents with job coaching and sets them up with appropriate work attire — has been gearing up for a serious makeover.

And now the transformation has begun.

Officials, volunteers and supporters celebrated Tuesday the opening of a 12,000-square-foot clothing donation center in Irvine. Locals turned out with professional outfits, shoes, jewelry and accessories in hand, ready to be donated.

The opening of the facility marks an important first step in a $2.67-million rebuilding plan that will help the organization recoup, and even expand upon, what was lost in the fire, said founder and chief executive Jerri Rosen.

"We've taken a warehouse and created this wonderful, warm and engaging environment for our donors," Rosen said. "This is like the point of entry for donors to learn about what we're doing at Working Wardrobes."

Tuesday's ceremony marked the beginning of several new developments on the horizon for the nonprofit organization — a new career center in Santa Ana is scheduled to open after the Fourth of July weekend thanks, in part, to more than $1 million in donations.

Four retail clothing stores in Costa Mesa, Tustin, Laguna Niguel and Garden Grove are due to reopen to the visiting public later in July, after a fourmonth hiatus necessitated by the coronavirus pandemic.

The group is looking forward to holding a grand-reopening celebration in late September.

"A lot has happened, and it's happened in a very short period of time," Rosen said of the effort. "This is taking 30 years and condensing everything into five months of rebuilding.

Rosen said the cause of the fire — which broke out in the early morning hours of Feb. 2 and resulted in $12 million in property and content loss was never determined.

"It was an old building and not in the best condition," she added. "We just knew we needed to rebuild and not at that location."

Immediately following the disaster, employees and volunteers found a temporary home at a Goodwill facility in Santa

Defense raises the possibility of judge bias in surgeon rape case

BY HILLARY DAVIS

Attorneys for the Newport Beach surgeon and his girlfriend accused of serially drugging and raping several women in the doctor's seaside home are arguing for the judge assigned to the case to step aside because of a possible bias toward an alleged victim's attorney.

The motion to disqualify Orange County Superior Court Judge Gregory Jones from the case against Dr. Grant Robicheaux and Cerissa Riley came the morning of a scheduled hearing Friday to determine if the O.C. district attorney's office would continue to prosecute the case in light of D.A. Todd Spitzer's unsuccessful attempt to have Jones drop all charges against the pair for insufficient evidence. The state attorney general's office could take the case instead.

The allegation of judicial bias stems from a closed-door meeting between Jones and Matt Murphy, a former deputy district attorney and current victims' rights lawyer, the day before the February dismissal hearing.

Noting Jones' own observations of politics "infecting" the case, which became a flash point in the pitched election battle between Spitzer and predecessor Tony Rackauckas, the attorneys said proceedings must be "transparent, unbiased and neutral." 'In many ways, the appearance of justice is no less critical to the public's trust in the judicial system than justice itself," wrote attorneys Philip Kent Cohen, Scott Borthwick and Shawn Holley. "In this case, that trust has been eroded based upon the actual bias and the appearance of such bias that exists between this court and an attorney for a number of the alleged charged and uncharged victims in this case, Matt Murphy.'

Murphy told the Orange County Register Friday that he was legally required to meet privately with Jones because the bid by Spitzer's office to "advance the hearing without providing notice to the victims created an ethical dilemma concerning my representation of one of my clients." He denied any wrongdoing.

Jones said from the bench Friday that he needed time to respond to the defense team's motion and rescheduled the hearing for June 19.

Huntington Beach High's Jake Vogel is selected by L.A. Dodgers in MLB Draft

BY ANDREW TURNER

Huntington Beach High School baseball coach Benji Medure can remember being a Dodgers fan from the time he was a small child, watching games and listening to the voice of Vin Scully on a little television in his grandma's kitchen as early as age 2.

Medure experienced a thrill unlike any other when Jake Vogel, the standout center fielder for the Oilers, was selected by the Dodgers in the third round (100th overall) in the Major League Baseball Draft on Thursday.

"I've been a huge fan," Medure said. "But [I have] never had a player, one of my players, play in their organization, so this is a first."

Vogel, who graduated from Huntington Beach High on Wednesday, has a decision to make, as he has committed to play college baseball at UCLA.

college baseball at UCLA.
On the decision facing Vogel, Medure said that while he feels Vogel is ready to play professional baseball, either choice would be a good option.
He added that playing for a college program like
UCLA under head coach John Savage is also
"worth its weight in gold."

For his high school career, the speedy Vogel posted a .350 batting average with 12 home runs, 12 triples and 22 doubles in 74 varsity games. He scored 59 runs, had 43 runs batted in, and reeled off 31 stolen bases.

Vogel was named a 2020 Perfect Game All-American and was selected to participate in the Area Code Games in 2019. He earned All-CIF Southern Section Division 1 honors in 2019. He was also a repeat selection to the Daily Pilot Baseball Dream Team as a junior.

It was his sophomore season when Vogel became Huntington Beach's starting center fielder and leadoff hitter, but he was also called up for the playoffs as a freshman.

In 2019, he helped Huntington Beach advance to the Division 1 semifinals, hitting a game-winning home run at Aliso Niguel in the quarterfinals.

The coronavirus pandemic canceled the majority of the high school and college baseball seasons this year, and the MLB Draft was shortened to just five rounds.

In a small sample size as a senior, Vogel made the impression he might have hoped to for scouts. He hit for the cycle in his last game in a 16-4 win against a previously unbeaten Laguna Beach team.

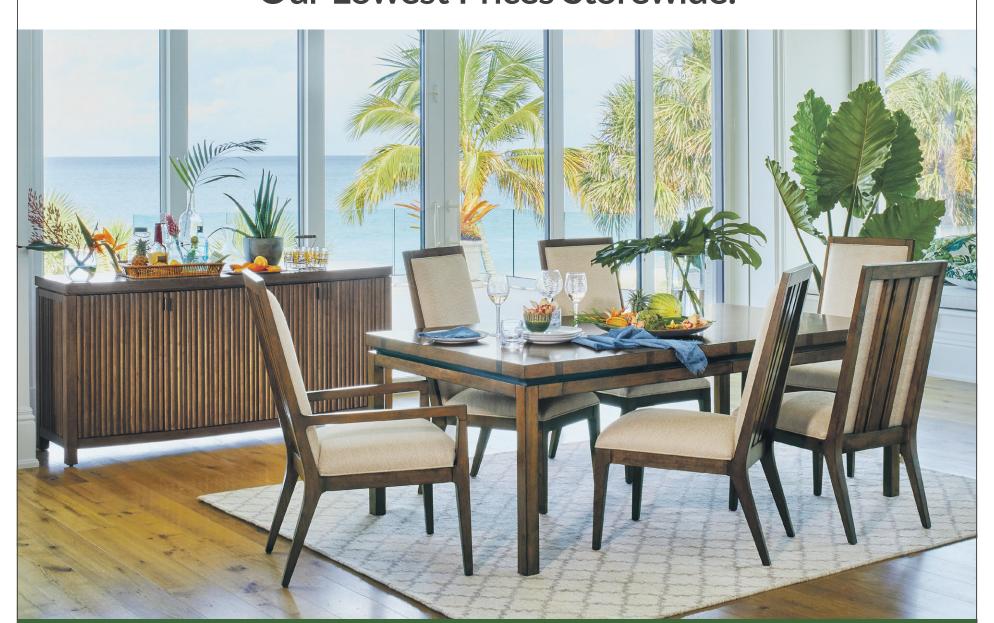

Medure noted that Vogel's hot streak at the plate started the game before.

"We played Corona del Mar the Friday before that," Medure said. "He was three for four, and he missed the cycle by a double, so he was seven for his last eight, and he almost hit for two cycles, was his final sendoff in high school. That's pretty cool. That is about as good as you can end your career right there."

Huntington Beach recently had Nick Pratto (Kansas City Royals, 14th overall) and Hagen Danner (Toronto Blue Jays, 61st overall) selected out of high school in the same draft in 2017.

Laguna Beach visitors and residents will soon be able to walk the Promenade on Forest

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Lower Forest Avenue in Laguna Beach is shutting down for the summer for a pilot program called the Promenade on Forest, which will provide a space where patrons can eat and interact safely while allowing restaurants the space availability to operate at sustainable levels.

The city will be holding a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 8 a.m. Monday.

The program is one of several recommendations approved by the City Council to be implemented in an economic recovery and business development plan to revitalize the city's local economy as the coronavirus pandemic has caused the cancellation of at least one of Laguna Beach's main summer festivals and ahead of a prospective $12-million loss in city revenue.

The Promenade on Forest will close off the stretch of Forest Avenue between Coast Highway and Glen-Street through neyre Sept. 7.

and friends from a physical distance, while allowing local businesses to reopen safely," Laguna Beach Assistant City Manager Shohreh Dupuis said in a statement.

The goal of the program was to support local businesses by expanding customer seating and merchandise display areas on lower Forest Avenue, the city said.

Discussion on the pilot program grew contentious in recent meetings, with some residents in favor of the program while others pointed to issues of parking, restrooms and city spending. Some speakers also asked why lower Forest Avenue specifically should be closed when other restaurants in the city would be unable to access the same spaces because of their locations elsewhere.

It is estimated to cost $248,703.

The Promenade on Forest will operate between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. Maintenance staff will also be onsite to disinfect the area.

Huntington Beach considers more outdoor options for businesses

BY HILLARY DAVIS

Huntington Beach is considering closing a block of downtown to vehicular traffic for the summer to help businesses expand outdoors and bounce back from pandemic closures.

The proposal, which is up for City Council consideration Monday, would make Main Street between Walnut and Olive avenues for pedestrians only so several decks known as "parklets" could temporarily jut into the road, allowing adjacent restaurants and shops on both sides of Main to expand. The parklets would make up some of the interior space lost to physical distancing requirements still in place to slow the spread of the coronavirus as businesses reopen after weeks of shutdowns.

With council approval, city would spend $175,000 to have a private vendor, Torrance-based Choura Events, build out and furnish the decks. The project would be covered by Huntington's $1.7-million share of federal CARES Act recovery funds. The Downtown Business Improvement District could also chip in funds.

Seven decks would offer extra space for shopping and communal take-away dining for the several eateries on the street from July 1 through Labor Day, Sept. 7. In doing so, the decks would temporarily knock out 19 curbside parking spaces — although city staff say that the area can absorb the parking loss because even with the increased activity, downtown won't be back to pre-pandemic normal just yet.

Planter boxes, string lighting, artworks and performances would soften and spruce up the setting.

The plan could also use the parking lot for the stillclosed International Surfing Museum for small-scale events.

The parklet stimulus generate could about $76,000 for the city through parking revenues and sales taxes just from the block's restaurants, according to a staff report.

The parklet proposal is in addition to a permitting program that allows businesses to temporarily expand onto sidewalks or other adjacent private or public property to maintain their usual occupancy.

Monday's meeting starts at 5 p.m. and will be broadcast live on huntington beach.legistar.com and the HBTV-3 cable television channel.

The Zoning Administrator of the City of Newport Beach will consider the following application:

Faerber Residence - A request for a coastal development permit to enclose two existing 65square-foot covered decks on the main and lower floor levels in order to enlarge two existing adjacent bedrooms, and to construct a 210-square-foot upper level addition. All interested parties may appear and present testimony in regard to this application. If you challenge this project in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you raised at the public hearing or in written correspondence delivered to the City, at, or prior to, the public hearing. pandemic has caused the university to pivot to its first remote ceremony in its 55-year-long history, the Irvine campus will be handing out 9,907 undergraduate degrees Saturday along with 886 master's degrees and 299 doctoral degrees.

About 47% of undergraduates this year are firstgeneration college students, the university said.

Fauci, the nation's top infectious disease expert, is part of the White House coronavirus task force, and in a statement sent out to students by UCI School of Biological Sciences dean Frank LaFerla, "a man who has become the voice of promise and resolve in the battle against coronavirus."

"Several weeks ago, when we began working on the [Biological Sciences] virtual reception and procession that follows the campus commencement presentation on Saturday, we pondered ways to surprise, inspire and delight these students who deserve praise and recognition," LaFerla said.

"We recruited an inspirational commencement speaker, Wajdie Ahmad, ... and we asked ourselves if there was anything more that we could do to make this commencement memorable."

"We sent a message to [Fauci], asking if he would consider speaking to our class of 2020. He said yes," LaFerla said.

Fauci's video message will be posted online following the university's commencement activities on Saturday, LaFerla said.

The graduation ceremony, and its subsequent receptions, can be viewed at commencement.uci.edu.

The recorded mencement ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. and individual receptions and celebrations will begin at 10:30 a.m. 'The class of 2020 has shown tremendous resilience and character in responding to the COVID-19 emergency and the need to learn remotely," said UCI Chancellor Howard Gillman in a statement.

"We are very proud of all they accomplished during their time with us, and we look forward to all they will achieve as they take their places as empowered and educated members of our society."

'This will not be the end of all of us," said Richard Nguyen, the school's valedictorian, in a speech dur-ing the event. "I know it's easy now to complain and resent the loss of our year, to post angry stories on Instagram, to let everyone know that this is not fair, but in doing so, we only rob ourselves of a chance to look past this obstacle in life and toward the bright futures that shine before us.'

In his speech, Andy Nguyen, one of the school's cosalutatorians, shared advice with his classmates that he said he has personally lived

"It's really just working to succeed because in our community, it is a lot of Latinos, and you don't really see a lot of people go outside and succeed, so I think that's what a Lobo is. They're looking for their own success. They're not just waiting for it to be handed to them.'

More than 500 viewers tuned in to watch the livestream of the commencement ceremony. Kathleen Nguyen, 18, a standout guard on the girls' basketball team, did so with her parents and sister on the computer at home.

"This just shows how strong the class of 2020 is," Nguyen said of not having an in-person graduation. "Setback after setback, and we always get back up. That's what this day resembles to me. A day where I use my setbacks as a launchpad to success."

Nguyen is the first in her family to go to college. She will also attend UC Merced, where she plans to major in biological science with the goal of going to medical school.

Moises Magdaleno, 17, who was a starting inside linebacker on the football team, was unable to watch the graduation due to a work commitment, but he has an idea of what he would like to do next.

An aspiring landscaper who wants to start his own business, Moises remarked that it was special to be the class to graduate after years of watching peers accomplish the feat.

"Going through four years and remembering our freshman and sophomore year, thinking we had three years and two years left, to finally see the day come," he said.

"It just feels unreal because we're finally one of those seniors that we see go away, and now everybody is looking at us go away, as well, so that's special."
