Fishing ban is lifted on O.C. coastline 2 months after spill

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Nearly two months after the closure of Orange County's coast in the aftermath of the estimated 25,000-gallon oil spill off of Huntington Beach, the California Department of Fish and Wildlife made an announcement Monday — let them fish.

The order was lifted Tuesday afternoon to the relief of business owners impacted by the closure of the fisheries in addition to local politicians, including state Sen. Dave Min (D-Irvine) and Orange County Supervisor Katrina Foley.

"I am relieved to see that our fisheries will finally be able to reopen," Foley said in a statement.

"This oil spill immediately put a halt to the operations of many small businesses in our community whose livelihoods depend on the ability to fish off our Southern California coast. The business owners I have had the privilege to hear from in the last few months are resilient and my hope is that overcoming this final hurdle will finally help them get back on their feet."

The order was initially implemented in October, prohibiting the taking of all fish and shellfish from Huntington Beach to Dana Point.

That closure was later extended to an estimated 650 square miles of marine waters and about 45 miles of shoreline, according to the state agency. Boundaries included all bays and harbors from Seal Beach to San Onofre State Beach in San Diego County.

A glass of wine generates some flak

Newport Beach Councilman Noah Blom has drawn criticism for having a taste while at council meetings.

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Newport Beach Councilman Noah Blom said he enjoys a glass of red wine with every dinner. There's no problem with that, residents say, except when it's during City Council meetings.

Blom said the issue first came up following the council's last meeting on Nov. 16, when he said he dumped a nearly full cup of red wine into the trash following the meeting.

Residents Tuesday night condemned his actions and argued that a council member shouldn't be allowed to drink while sitting on the dais and that it may affect his judgment.

Blom confirmed Wednesday morning that he has consumed wine at prior meetings and hasn't hidden it, though he objects to being viewed as a role model.

Surf City resident Eric Parra is new police chief

BY MATT SZABO

Huntington Beach has hired a Surf City native to guide its police force.

The Huntington Beach City Council approved the hiring of Eric Parra as police chief by a 6-0-1 vote in a special meeting Wednesday afternoon. Councilman Erik Peterson was absent.

Parra, 57, is currently the police chief of Alhambra, a position he's held since March. He came to Alhambra after 31 years with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, where he reached the rank of division chief before leaving in 2019.

Parra, who said he will start Dec. 27, takes over for interim chief Julian Harvey, who was hired in November 2020 after Robert Handy retired. He has been ROOF SHINGLES, torn from the roof of a model train depot at Costa Mesa's Fairview Park, were strewn about the parking lot by vandals.

O.C. Model Engineers steamed over vandalism at Fairview Park train depot

BY SARA CARDINE

Orange County Model Engineers — who offer free mini-train rides to the public at Costa Mesa's Fairview Park — arrived at the depot Wednesday morning to find vandals had stormed the station and a nearby storage building, causing extensive, and costly, damage.

"I've never seen anything like this," member Hank Castignetti said of the scene. "We've had graffiti and stuff before, but they just destroyed the place. They went absolutely nuts."

Suspects reportedly ripped shingles off the roof of the train depot, pried open metal roll-up windows, smashed nearby picnic tables and damaged the station's water supply.

Locks and light fixtures were found ripped from their moorings, and fire extinguisher cases were broken into and their contents stolen.

Play, pose and pirouette as H.B.'s Bella Terra celebrates the holidays

BY SARA CARDINE

Mrs. Claus on Wednesday made the long journey from the North Pole to the Huntington Beach open-air shopping, dining and entertainment center Bella Terra, leading a ballet lesson for youth in the first of several holiday-themed events this month.

Young children lined up in an orderly fashion in an outdoor courtyard to receive the free lesson, which covered the ballerina basics — from plié to relevé to sauté — courtesy of Jenny Jones from Orange County-based Creative Parties for Kids, who fashioned Mrs. Claus' signature red dress into a tutu style.

Afterward, participants posed with Santa's better half as parents snapped pics in a free photo session. Cat Hansen, marketing manager for the shopping complex, said her team annually books several outdoor concerts, storybook readings and holiday events throughout December to entertain children.

"Bella Terra is a community center, so we like to provide community events for all children in Huntington Beach and the surrounding areas," she said Tuesday.

For example, visitors can take advantage of a fun photo op this Friday through Sunday when Mrs. Claus returns to the center, this time with Santa in tow for pictures on the Green outside Century theater.

In "Let it Snow," running Fridays and Saturdays at 5 and 6 p.m. through Dec. 18, children can hear stories from the Snow Queen and Snow Princess and enjoy the conjuring of wintertime snow flurries.

Fountain Valley School District middle schoolers will perform their own holiday program on Dec. 11 from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

And on Dec. 13 from 10 to 11 a.m., children can make crafts and learn tricks during a special Kids Club event, "Elfas Parsley's Holiday Magic Show."

Other holiday characters scheduled to make appearances include Buddy the Elf, the Grinch, holiday Princess Bell, Spider-Man, Black Panther and Jack Skellington.

"It's very festive and fun, and there's a lot of great energy and lots of things going on," Hansen said of the season's offerings.

cian. I will say that again. I am my own person. I vote my own heart, and I do so based on what I think is best and right for the city,” Blom said Tuesday night. “In doing that, I think that I am also in a very different position of a lot of people that I’m from a different fabric and from a different cloth.

“I know based on the rhetoric that politics has produced that it is not the cloth I’m from,” Blom said.

“There’s very angry politics out there, and I don’t want to be part of that ever. I want to be up here to support everyone that wants to be positive and supportive. I fully recognize how that was not what we want to be doing up here as I’ve heard it from many people from different accords.

“From this point forward, I think all you’ll ever see up here is some iced tea, maybe a beautiful cappuccino or a glass of water from me because it’s no longer in the decorum of what the public would like,” Blom said, thanking residents for their comments.

But some residents objected to Blom’s statements, with some describing his actions as improper and his apology as condescending.

One resident brought a glass of sparkling cider to illustrate her point, describing a monologue by Blom at the Oct. 26 council meeting about the “Elect Our Mayor” ballot initiative as incoherent.

Others called on other City Council members to prohibit drinking alcohol at public meetings.

Newport Beach city code prohibits the drinking of any alcoholic beverages in or on public streets, alleys, sidewalks, public or private parking lots, restrooms, piers, beaches, vacant lots or public parks.

It does not, however, include public buildings, such as City Hall and the City Council chambers.

NOAH BLOM, pictured at City Hall in November 2020, represents Newport Beach City Council District 5.

Councilwoman Diane Dixon suggested the matter be brought up for discussion at the next council meeting on Dec. 14.

“I think part of our issue in the city is that we probably need to clarify and define appropriate council decorum so people understand what it is because it has not been clarified,” Dixon said.

In an interview with the Daily Pilot Wednesday, Blom said he has read the city code and didn’t see anything explicit about decorum.

“I get it that the city and government is a different entity that takes itself more seriously, but sometimes I think we lose sight of who we represent, that this isn’t mob rule in the city,” Blom said.

“We have a lot of people that live in Newport Beach. If I listen to the thousand people on Nextdoor, who are paranoid about everything that comes up before the dais, but not to the thousands of other people, then I have a failing grade across the board. I’ve never pretended to be anyone other than who I am.”

testing seafood in the area, businesses like Newport Landing and Davey's Locker Sportfishing & Whale Watching had to pass up good fishing in nearby spots to keep fishers safe and follow state guidelines.

Authorities announced Monday there was no further risk to public health from consumption of seafood in the affected area.

Education manager Jessica Roame said the business saw the greatest impact in the first five days following the oil spill, which included the temporary closure of Newport Harbor.

Once the closures lifted, the company was able to resume its whale-watching tours, but its sportfishing tours had to stay on hold for at least three weeks before operators could figure out a way to take people out farther beyond the impacted region.

"Fishing is so nice on the coast of Orange County, but the whole of that area was blocked off. Thankfully, our crew and captains were ... able to strategize a Plan B, but they had been telling me that [they] were driving past really good fishing areas and having to tell customers that [they] couldn't anchor up there," Roame said.

"We can't fish there, but we're seeing all these fish here," Roame said. "We have to go 15 miles this way. It's been a big pain, but thankfully that's over now."

Pipeline operator Amplify Energy is currently facing a number of lawsuits — including two from a bait and tackle store in Costa Mesa and a Newport Harbor fuel dock — that allege the company acted negligently for failing to maintain its aging infrastructure and that the businesses themselves faced financial losses as a result of it.

But Roame said that at least for Newport Landing and Davey's Locker, the biggest impact has not necessarily been the closures but public perception.

She said she didn't want to understate the environmental impacts of the spill, which has killed a number of birds, sea lions and a bottlenose dolphin, according to the Oiled Wildlife Care Network at UC Davis.

Officials said Tuesday that the Unified Command, responsible for coastline cleanup, has signed off on 69 shoreline segments out of a total of 107 — about 190 miles of coast.

But beaches, in addition to Newport Harbor, reopened about a week after the oil spill, which meant business for much of the harbor could return to some normalcy. However, Roame said she canceled trips early on due to the circumstances and fielded a number of cancellations and calls from people concerned about their potential impacts on the waters.

She's gotten fewer calls these days, but business is slower compared to this same period last year.

"We're very excited and we're happy to hear there's no risk to public health to seafood consumption," Roame said.

"We were very hopeful that was going to be the case. We're back to business as usual, moving back to the holiday season ... COVID was the first issue, then the oil spill. It's one hit after another. It's really hard for local businesses to bounce back after really traumatic events like that," she added.

"We're hoping with the fisheries opening back up that people will get back out, get back on the water and do more of our fishing in the local area."

living in Huntington Beach since 1993, and said he intends this to be his last position in law enforcement.

"It is a remarkable feeling," he said. "It doesn't matter where I work, I give 200% wherever I'm at. But to go to work every day, put in effort in my community, then drive home and see it coming together ... that's the world to me.

"Now, if there's something I put into play that's not working, I'll know it when I'm on the way home. I'll know it when I'm driving around, when I go to the store. It will give me the opportunity to constantly measure whether I'm effective or not."

Parra holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Cal State Long Beach and a law degree from Western State. He is licensed by the State Bar of California. Through his career he helped lead Los Angeles County jail system reforms, community policing programs and a variety of patrol initiatives.

He said public trust, transparency and accountability are challenges for law enforcement in general right now. In terms of Huntington Beach specifically, he identified homelessness and proper policing for large events as two key issues.

"We need to figure out how to partner better with our local, state and federal partners to have full wrap-around services and full connection with other services," Parra said, addressing homelessness. "It's not just law enforcement, it [should be] everybody working together from a government, nonprofit and community perspective to help homeless people reach a level where they're not homeless, they're employable and they're functional in society."

The city launched a mobile mental health crisis response team in a partnership with Be Well OC this year, freeing up police officers.

out from the community what they believe the officers should do with that time," Parra said. "What type of enforcement efforts would they like to see? Then, we're using that time for something that's productive and something that the community wants."

Huntington Beach City Council members commended Harvey for his service, particularly during a turbulent time for the city. At the same time, they said they look forward to working with Parra.

"Besides the chemistry and the personality and the stellar qualifications, we have a hometown hero in our next chief," City Councilman Mike Posey said, addressing Parra. "You live here, and that's comforting to know."

Mayor Kim Carr said the first time she met Parra, "I went, 'Oh my gosh, this guy's serious.'"

"You were a little bit imposing," she said. "Then once we got to know you, you're a really funny guy. You have a great sense of humor, and it was fascinating to see that whole evolution. I'm really looking forward to getting to know you."

"Our city absolutely adores our police officers, and we support them. This is a community that will support you, and this is a council that will support you. If there's anything that you need, just let us know because we've got your back."

Vincent James McGuinness

December 5, 1934 - November 25, 2021

On a crisp, sun-shiny, winter day in early December, 1934, a young mother walked herself to the hospital in Brooklyn, NY to give birth to her fifth child, a son named Vincent. The boy spent summer days playing sports and visiting Brooklyn Dodger games. Before school each day he would be the first one on the basketball court at the parish school. As a son of Irish immigrant parents, his childhood in Brooklyn during the depression, grounded him in hard work, family, and faith.

Vincent James McGuinness, son of Michael and Agnes, was the youngest of 5 and little brother to Michael, Alice, Edward and Hugh. Following graduation from Brooklyn Preparatory Academy in 1952, Vince entered Brooklyn College. In a hurry, impatient to learn, and always looking to move ahead, Vince worked as a fashion model and as runner on the New York Stock Exchange. Halfway through college, Vince found the Marine Corp Platoon Leadership Candidate program (PLC) which funded his remaining education.

Commissioned as an officer and a gentleman, Vince transferred to Southern California with the Marine Corp in 1958. One late-winter afternoon in '59, during a visit to the Sandpiper Lounge in Laguna Beach, Vince (a true romantic) first spotted Joy and she became the love of his life. Less than a year later, Vince and Joy married on February 6th, 1960, at St. Benedict Catholic Church and settled in Orange County; blessed with four children, Kelly, Vince, Kara, and Kim.

Still moving fast, but not in a hurry, Vince jump started his professional career at Dean Witter and found his calling in the investment management industry. Before age 35 he became National Sales Manager for Shareholders Capital. A man of action and endless energy, Vince was recognized for his character, integrity, and timeless sense of style. With a wink and smile, Vince began his entrepreneurial endeavors. The ingenuity and creativity that followed led to the creation of McGuinness & Associates/Endeavor Group, a national business that successfully grew for a quarter of a century.

Vince loved to share travel adventures with family, friends and business colleagues. The McGuinness clan found themselves skiing, hiking, boating and traveling to beautiful locales, including the family favorite, Sun Valley. Vince enjoyed dinners at special restaurants, romantic getaways, fun family adventures including 4 spirited "outlaws" and 14 grandchildren, as well as hosting elaborate overseas business trips for hundreds.

Approaching age 87 and almost 62 years of marriage, Vince surrendered to our Lord on November 25th, 2021 with his megawatt smile and Joy at his side; survived and comforted by Joy, Kelly (Ron Lloyd), Vince (Kristen), Kara (Adam Rhodes), Kim (Drew Gordon), their 14 grandchildren--Whitney (Nikolas Minoglou), Hayden (Doree), Bryson (Zoe) and Riley Lloyd; Nick, Kennedy, Joe, and Will McGuinness; Quincy (Tony Dashevsky), Jasper, and Sawyer Rhodes; Dawson, Chloe, and MacKenzie Gordon; and 3 (soon to be 4) great grandchildren--Koda and Aliza Dashevsky, Rose Lloyd and baby Minoglou. We are all tremendously grateful for the many gifts with which he blessed us; his love, faith, loyalty, kindness, charm, and generosity.

Vince's life and memories will be celebrated with a Funeral Mass at Our Lady Queen of Angels Catholic Church in Newport Beach on Thursday, December 2nd, 2021 at 3PM. In lieu of flowers, please consider a contribution to Verbum Dei High School Scholarship Fund in Memory of Vince McGuinness, www.verbumdei.us.

Orange County SC claims USL crown with win over Tampa Bay Rowdies

BY ANDREW TURNER

Orange County Soccer Club capped a historic season Sunday, using a three-goal first half to come away with a 3-1 victory over the Tampa Bay Rowdies in the United Soccer League Championship final at Al Lang Stadium in St. Petersburg.

Forward Ronaldo Damus scored twice for Orange County (17-10-9).

The Haitian national team member finished the season with 18 goals, and he was named the MVP of the championship game.

"I feel good because the dream was to win a championship with Orange County," Damus said through an interpreter. "I feel much better now because I won the MVP."

"The first 20 minutes was just actually trying to get people to be a bit braver off the ball, push higher, be more aggressive, get in their face, because any team's a good team if you don't put pressure on them. The first time we really put a little bit of pressure on somebody, they gave us the ball. We score a goal."

— Orange County coach Richard Chaplow

Damus opened the scoring in the 25th minute. Eric Calvillo applied pressure to Jordan Scarlett, who attempted a pass along Tampa Bay's back line.

Damus intercepted the pass and found himself with an empty net to shoot at, converting the opportunity.

"I wanted [our back line] to be 10 yards higher up the field, which would then push our forwards closer to the ball, which would then allow us to get more pressure on it, hopefully, allow us to disrupt play a little more," Orange County coach Richard Chaplow said. "The first 20 minutes was just actually trying to get people to be a bit braver off the ball, push higher, be more aggressive, get in their face, because any team's a good team if you don't put pressure on them."

"The first time we really put a little bit of pressure on somebody, they gave us the ball. We score a goal. That settled us down."

It was the same combination that came together for Orange County's second goal in the 38th minute. Calvillo made a run down the right sideline and skipped a cross into the box for Damus, who took a touch to control the ball before sending a shot into the left side of the cage.

Tampa Bay (26-8-2) had a chance to get on the board first, as Yann Ekra drew a foul against Kevin Alston in the box. Orange County goalkeeper Patrick Rakovsky made a diving save to his right to deny Sebastian Guenzatti on the ensuing penalty kick.

“I definitely knew that he was the type of player that is going a lot across his body, so right foot to the left,” Rakovsky said.

“I basically decided already when he put the ball down that I’m going to that side. Luckily, he didn’t shoot it low or high. Quite a lot of power behind it, but it wasn’t right to the post, so it was a nice ball for the keeper.”

Rakovsky made six saves and punched out a couple of entry passes that were sent into the box.

“Does it surprise me when he makes these saves? Absolutely not,” Chaplow said of Rakovsky. “I see them all the time. We knew the quality of keeper we were getting when we signed him. I’m delighted for him. We’re all getting to see the [quality saves] first-hand, although, I would have liked to have seen them slightly less today.”

Mikko Kuningas tacked on for Orange County in the 45th minute, tucking in a free kick inside the left post to extend the lead to 3-0.

“It’s an extremely proud moment,” Oliver Wyss, general manager and president of soccer operations for Orange County Soccer Club, said. “I couldn’t be happier for the club, the organization and for everybody involved.”

Leo Fernandes scored in the second half for Tampa Bay, which emerged out of the Eastern Conference after winning the Atlantic Division with a league-best 71 points this season.
