Newport Beach gives back to military families through Operation Christmas t's the season of giving in Newport Beach. Dozens of military families

Dozens of military families from across Orange County will receive donations of gifts from Newport Beach residents as part of Operation Christmas, an outreach program organized by nonprofit Our Nation's Heroes Foundation. The city's involvement with the campaign dates back at least 15 years, according to city staff.

Organizers picked up donations at Fire Station 7 on Wednesday.

"The city is proud of our longtime partnership with Operation Christmas to support our military families and their children," Fire Chief Jeff Boyles said. "I'd like to thank our residents for their generous donations of toys and other gifts that will make a lot of kids happy this Christmas."

The campaign itself dates back to 2004.

Gifts will be distributed to families across all military branches in Orange County and nationwide, all as a part of an effort that "chief elf" Brad White said was to show military families that citizens appreciated and supported them for their efforts.

White said some families this year have been affected by the pandemic and left parents without a job. He added that he wasn't even sure there would be a drive this year because of COVID-19, but that "Christmas miracles have been happening every day."

"We've done [Operation Christmas] before and we're all used to doing it, but it's literally almost like a Christmas movie. You don't know what's going to happen the next day. I don't mean to sound generic, but it's absolutely heartwarming and amazing and there is so many good feelings and Christmas hope," White said. "Things are going to be OK. We're all going to get through this together."

About 3,000 presents are estimated to have been collected for distribution, and White said Operation Christmas will continue to collect donations even after the holidays for families.

"We're on Christmas duty with our Santa hats," White said in an interview Tuesday, laughing. "Anything that comes with an 11th-hour arrival, we'll make sure it gets to [the families]."

Laguna Beach billionaire Bill Gross harassed his neighbor with 'Gilligan's Island' song, judge rules

BY LAURENCE DARMIENTO

Billionaire bond investor Bill Gross and his girlfriend were found Wednesday by a Orange County Superior Court judge to have harassed their neighbors with loud music, including the theme song to the classic TV show "Gilligan's Island," in a dispute over a $1-million outdoor lawn sculpture.

Judge Kimberly Knill also ruled that Gross had failed to prove that his Laguna Beach neighbor, Mark Towfiq, had invaded his privacy

She issued a civil harassment order prohibiting Gross and his partner, Amy Schwartz, from violating the noise provisions of the city's municipal code and playing music on their outdoor speakers when they were not outside themselves. She denied Gross' own request for a civil harassment order.

The decision followed a trial for dueling civil harassment orders that started Nov. 9 and concluded last week after nine days of testimony and closing arguments, including a break when the 76-year-old retired bond investor and his partner were potentially exposed to the coronavirus.

It featured the kind of legal fire power more typical of high-stakes litigation than a dispute between neighbors, with each party employing a battery of attorneys, including quick-ontheir-feet trial litigators who questioned 11 witnesses.

Even in Southern California, where fights between rich and famous neighbors are something of a staple, the dispute that broke out in Laguna Beach between a wealthy tech entrepreneur and the even wealthier bond investor attracted attention.

One side claimed harassment by loud music after complaining about netting put up to protect the outdoor sculpture; the other side alleged invasion of privacy by a neighbor they accused of being a Peeping Tom.

The blue, blown-glass lawn sculpture by artist Dale Chihuly, whose work adorns the Bellagio Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas, was installed by Gross and partner Amy Schwartz last year near the property line they shared with Towfiq and his wife on a stretch of South Coast Highway home to mansions.

COVID-19 infections surpass 2 million statewide

In Orange County, health officials report 3,490 more cases, while 1,893 are being treated in area hospitals.

BY SARA CARDINE

As the ongoing tide of coronavirus cases pushes health-care workers to their breaking point — and with the number of COVID-19 patients and those on ventilators at an all-time pandemic high — Orange County hospitalizations continued to ratchet upward Thursday.

Orange County Health Care Agency officials reported Thursday 3,490 more individuals had been infected with the virus, while 1,893 were being treated for COVID-19 in area hospitals. Of those, 405 were in being seen in intensive care units.

The news comes as the California Department of Public Health announced Thursday the number of infections statewide had surpassed 2 million people, with 2,003,146 confirmed cases to date.

"While this means we are leveraging our testing capacity, it is a reminder that this virus continues to spread through our communities," Dr. Mark Ghaly, Secretary of California's Health and Human Services Agency said in a statement. "Hospitals are full, ICU beds are few, people are dying. The simplest thing we can do, but also the most significant, is to stay home."

Waymakers shelters calling for holiday donations

The youth facilities, with locations in Huntington Beach and Laguna, have been hard hit by COVID-19.

BY MATT SZABO

Carol Carlson knows that the novel coronavirus pandemic can really weigh on children.

Carlson, the program director of the Waymakers Orange County youth shelters in Laguna Beach and Tustin, has seen it firsthand.

"We're concerned about the fragility of the kids," she said. "What's happened is that kids who already were at risk or suffering from depression and anxiety, this has kind of caused even more isolation for them. They don't have their peers or school or other places where they can have outlets for some of those feelings and symptoms, and they're maybe living in a home where there's been some financial strain because of the pandemic."

Carlson said that homelessness also has increased among the 12- to 17-year-olds served by Waymakers, the Santa Anabased nonprofit which also has a youth shelter in Huntington Beach.

And funds are low, also due to COVID-19. With local businesses also struggling, she is appealing to the public for help this holiday season.

Carlson, who first started volunteering at the Laguna Beach youth shelter in 1988, California counties, implemented Dec. 7 and expected to last for a threeweek period, would likely extended beyond Dec. 28 but did not indicate for how much longer.

Thursday's new Orange County cases pushes the county's total number of infections so far to 138,310 individuals. A single death recorded brings Orange County fatalities to 1,782.

County residents between ages 25 and 55 accounted for nearly 52% of all the new cases, or 1,796 infections, with a reported 678 people between the ages of 25 and 34 recorded Thursday as infected.

Orange County's sevenday average of new cases stands at 51.8 per 100,000 residents, while the average health equity quartile positivity rate rose this week to 22.7%.

With Christmas just one day away, coronavirus testing super sites were packed with vehicles. Some 20,130 tests were issued countywide Thursday, bringing the cumulative number of tests issued to 1,926,712 and accounting for a seven-day average testing positivity rate of 15.2%.

Here are the latest cumulative coronavirus case counts and COVID-19 deaths for select cities in

Orange County: • Santa Ana: 26,935 cases; 360 deaths

• Anaheim: 23,292 cases; 381 deaths

 Huntington Beach: 5,517 cases; 96 deaths

• Costa Mesa: 4,492 cases; 51 deaths

• Irvine: 5,039 cases; 20 deaths • Newport Beach: 2,068

cases; 28 deaths • Fountain Valley: 1,730

cases; 25 deaths • Laguna Beach: 460 cases; fewer than five deaths

Here are the case counts by age group, followed by deaths:

• 0 to 17: 12,957 cases; one death

• 18 to 24: 19,660 cases; five deaths

• 25 to 34: 28,763 cases; 26 deaths

• 35 to 44: 21,842 cases; 42 deaths • 45 to 54: 22,361 cases;

131 deaths • 55 to 64: 16,940 cases;

242 deaths • 65 to 74: 8,449 cases;

The Laguna Beach Youth Shelter, a threestory bungalow built in 1939, has been a mainstay in the community. It celebrated its 40th anniversary last year.

"We're asking for the community to give if they can," she said. "We know everybody's struggling right now, but we could really use some help during the holidays in particular, to be able to make sure we keep our essential services going and our doors open for the kids."

She said the pandemic has caused the youth shelters to have the longest wait lists she has seen, and the struggle is keeping them going 24-7 given the constraints in place.

"It's temporary shelter for children who are experiencing difficulty at home or have had a suicide attempt or threat, and need a safe respite to recover and stabilize," Carlson

"Our goal always is for family reunification. We're keeping them safe and working with them, we're doing counseling, 24-hour care and teaching them coping skills. We're working with the families to kind of restore some peace in their households and help them with safety planning for their child, then reunifying them so that they can hopefully go on to a little more successful days ahead."

Waymakers' Huntington Beach Youth Shelter, which has been open for 14 years, has 12 beds to serve youth in need.

The organization is doing its best to navigate the COVID-19 waters while giving some holiday cheer to the youngsters in need.

"The clients we serve predominantly are struggling anyway, so they have a lot of challenges," Waymakers Executive Director Ronnetta Johnson said. "Anything we can do to help alleviate those challenges, especially at the holiday time, can make things a little bit more normal, so to speak. Helping them to have their gifts and just a little bit of brightness in their lives is really important."

GROSS

Towfiq testified that while the 22-foot-long installation featuring swimming marlin, traditional Japanese fishing globes and cobalt-colored reeds "wasn't necessarily our style," he and his wife Carol Nakahara weren't bothered by it.

However, he said they were far less pleased when their neighbors in April erected a 12-foot-high netting structure to protect the sculpture during tree trimming and stormy weather—yet it rarely came down. Nakahara, on the stand, called it "legitimately like a big soccer net."

Towfiq said he tried multiple times to resolve the issue, texting Schwartz, contacting the couple's property manager and even sending a letter.

He said he ultimately felt "helpless" and decided to complain to the city, which issued Gross a July 28 notice of violation stating the sculpture and netting structure lacked permits. The next weekend, Towfiq testified, the noise harassment began — "I immediately connected the two," he

A fair portion of the trial was spent on the noise complaints, including the allegation that Gross and Schwartz played the iconic theme song to the classic TV show "Gilligan's Island" on a loop at all hours.

Towfiq testified the music from their neighbor's outdoor speaker system was so loud it penetrated the concrete walls of his multimillion-dollar house, designed by a noted modernist architect, forcing the couple to move out of their master bedroom — it was "almost like PTSD," he said.

In support of the accusations, Towfiq's attorney called to the stand Laguna Beach police officers, who testified that they heard loud music coming from the Gross and Schwartz residence while responding to noise complaints.

One of the officers and a city code enforcement official also testified that Gross and Schwartz said they would lower the music if Towfiq dropped his complaint about the sculpture.

Chase Scolnick, the trial attorney for Towfiq and his wife, made hay of a Gross text responding to Towfiq's request to turn down the music: "Peace on all fronts or well [sic] just have nightly concerts big boy." Gross testified that the text actually referred to Towfiq's picture-taking, behavior that the bond investor described as "peeping."

Jill Basinger, the trial attorney for Gross and Schwartz, tried to poke holes in the noise harassment claims. She argued they were overblown and called in an audio expert to create doubt about the accuracy of iPhone recordings made by Towfiq, since the volume controls can be manipulated.

"Yes. It is true. Mr. Gross and Ms. Schwartz play music. They play music at night. They like music," argued Basinger.

She said that the only recording evidence presented at trial of the "Gilligan's Island" theme song and loud music being played past 9 p.m. occurred the weekend after the city notice was received.

But she argued that that was only because the couple had recently learned the TV show was special to them. Schwartz testified the couple discovered that the opening credits to "Gilligan's Island" featured a scene shot in Newport Beach that was identical to a view from another home they have there.

In attempting to prove Towfiq had an obsession with Gross and Schwartz, Basinger cited questions Towfiq had asked the neighbor selling the home and a real estate agent about the couple before they moved in. But when she queried Towfiq about those inquiries, she got an answer repeated in news reports as distant as Britain. Towfiq testified that he was warned by the neighbor that "I wouldn't want an angry billionaire with a short fuse living next to me."

Towfiq said he had been aware of the billionaire's nasty divorce and an unpleasant departure from PIMCO, which was covered by the media.

Before Gross took the stand, he published an open letter calling for an end to the trial and all other legal proceedings between the two sides, saying they should both donate their expected fees to area COVID-19 relief organizations.

"In the midst of this terrible global tragedy, a portion of the media is transfixed by ... a man who plays the theme song to a 1960s sitcom, and another who records him doing so," the letter stated. "I don't think many people would contend this litigation deserves the attention it has received during the deadliest pandemic in a century."

Towfiq's lead attorney, Jennifer Keller, rejected it, contending that Gross was "losing the trial badly" and wanted to "stem the tide of negative press." She added that if Gross really wanted to end it, he should pay for Towfiq's legal fees and apologize for the "awful lies" spread about him.

Towfiq had testified that he used his iPhone only to record noise violations, but when the trial resumed, the opposing side doubled down, with Gross denying he played loud music and testifying he and Schwartz had nicknamed their neighbor "Peeping Mark."

Schwartz, a former professional tennis player, testified that she witnessed Towfiq invading her privacy numerous times by recording her when she was swimming. "I'm scared. I feel violated. I feel afraid. I'm in a bikini or less," she said.

There was no photographic evidence submitted to support her assertion, and Towfiq's side presented friendly text exchanges between the two that began after the billionaire couple acquired the house for a reported $32 million and ended only after Towfiq complained about the netting.

Gross had announced on Dec. 10 that he had donated $500,000 to Orange County relief organizations even though Towfiq had rejected his offer to end all litigation.

A spokesman said the figure amounted to what the billionaire had spent on the dispute, including a separate lawsuit he filed in Orange County Superior Court against his neighbors— and where Towfiq and his wife also have filed their own lawsuit. A trial has yet to begin.

The Laguna Beach City Council will hold a virtual Public Meeting to consider the: Appeal of denial of Design Review 20-6841 and CEQA Categorical Exemption for modifications to an existing private vehicular and pedestrian gate in the R-1 (Residential Low Density) zone at 648 Canyon View Drive. Modifications include new gates, refaced columns, and a new keypad pedestal. The property owners have appealed the decision of the Design Review Board (DRB) to deny the project. They contend that the DRB did not proceed in a manner required by law and the decision was not supported by substantial evidence. The property owners assert the existing gate is in a legally permitted location and they cannot be compelled to construct a new gate in a new location. The property owners also assert that the location of the existing gate does not create a conflict with public access or public safety. SAID PUBLIC MEETING to be held Tuesday, January 12, 2021 at 5:00 p.m. For additional information, contact City staff: Chris Dominguez, Associate (949) 497-0745 Planner cdominguez@lagunabeachcity.net and/or the appellant: Phillip LoSasso of Cardenas Three, LLC (714) 809-6033 or philliplosasso@yahoo.com. You may also communicate comments about the proposed application and the appeal to members of the City Council, whose names and e-mail addresses listed on the City's (www.lagunabeachcity.net). At this time, the City Council Chambers will not be open to the public. However, comments may be made via teleconferencing during the hearing, or in writing prior to the hearing, when emailed or mailed to the City Clerk's office. Written correspondence should be delivered to City Hall by noon the day before the hearing; however, in order to allow sufficient time for Councilmembers and staff to review and consider your comments, it is recommended they be submitted to the City Clerk's office on or before 5:00 p.m., Tuesday, January 5, 2021. Procedures for participating in the virtual meeting are on the City's website linked to the meeting agenda. If, in the future, you wish to challenge the subject matter in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you (or someone else) raised at the Public Meeting described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the City Council at or prior to the Public Meeting. Ann Marie McKay, CMC, City Clerk
