ARTIST JESSE BARTELS, who works with mixed ceramic tiles, welcomes guests on the opening day of the Sawdust Festival in Laguna Beach.

A more familiar festival returns to Laguna Beach

The Sawdust Art Festival opened on Friday for more than just weekends, welcoming the public back to explore the grounds, shop for art and enjoy live music.

With the benefit of an outdoor marketplace, the Sawdust Art Festival didn't shut down last summer, but the pandemic limited it to weekends.

This year's event, which opened Friday, feels more like it once did, especially with the nearby Festival of the Arts and Pageant of the Masters reopening as well.

"I've been here 38 summers, I think, and to me, it just feels like home again," artist

Holiday boosts patients at animal nonprofit

Huntington Beach's Wetlands and Wildlife Care Center saw 120 animals admitted over Fourth of July weekend.

BY MATT SZABO

Much to the joy of revelers, fireworks light up the night sky every Fourth of July.

Animals are less enthusiastic about the bright lights and noise.

About 120 animals came through the Wetlands and Wildlife Care Center in Huntington Beach's doors over the three-day weekend, said Debbie McGuire, executive director.

They included a frightened peregrine falcon that flew into a window in Newport Coast and a black-crowned night heron chick that, due to fireworks, fell from its nest in Sunset Beach.

A gray fox, believed to have been scared by fireworks in Portola Hills, was brought in by Orange County Animal Control on Sunday night.

"I was told that a gentleman was driving along the road out there and he saw the fox, and he thought he might have hit it," McGuire said. "He slowed down and looked around and didn't see anything on the road, so he continued home. When he got home, she was stuck in the grille of his vehicle and still alive."

X-rays showed that the fox had suffered leg fractures and other injuries.

"We consulted our veterinarians, stabilized and splinted both legs, got her on pain medication, treated her for shock and started her on antibiotics,"

Pedestrian dies in early morning accident in Huntington Beach

A man died early Monday morning after being struck by a car on Beach Boulevard in Huntington Beach, police said.

Police responded at 2:52 a.m. to a traffic collision involving the pedestrian and a 2018 Kia Rio on Beach near Garfield Avenue, department spokeswoman Jennifer Carey said.

The pedestrian, identified as a 45-year-old man from Huntington Beach, was dead when officers arrived, Carey said.

The driver, a 35-year-old man from Anaheim, remained at the scene and cooperated with officers.

It does not appear that drugs or alcohol were factors in the accident, Carey said.

Based on the preliminary investigation, the silver Kia was traveling southbound on Beach when the pedestrian stepped from the center median into the road.

The investigation is ongoing. Witnesses are encouraged to contact traffic investigators Doug Demetre at (714) 536-5670 or Vishal Rattanchandani at (714) 536-5663.

Terry Donahue, former football coach at UCLA, dies at age 77

A member of the school's first Rose Bowl winner, he won more games with the Bruins than any other coach.

BY BEN BOLCH

Terry Donahue won more football games at UCLA than any other coach, establishing a blue-and-gold standard for sustained success over his 20 seasons at the school.

None of it would have been possible without what might have been his two greatest triumphs: getting to play for and coach the Bruins.

As an undersized defensive tackle initially passed over by the school, prompting stops at San Jose State and L.A. Valley College, he went from designated practice tackling dummy to two-year starter and member of the school's first Rose Bowl championship team.

As a coach, he rose from an untested 31-year-old to universally esteemed veteran, his 151 victories more than doubling the total of anyone else in school history. His 98 Pacific 10 victories

Donahue, the perpetually tanned, self-effacing and seemingly ageless coach who guided the Bruins to their longest run of football glory under a single coach, died Sunday evening at his home in Newport Beach surrounded by family after a two-year battle with cancer, the school announced. He was 77.

UCLA had announced in May 2019 that Donahue underwent surgery for an undisclosed form of cancer and was beginning chemotherapy. Donahue is survived by his wife Andrea and three daughters, Nicole, Michele and Jennifer, in addition to three sons-in-law and 10 grandchildren.

THE FOURTH OF JULY celebration with about 4,500 attendees ended with a fireworks extravaganza at the Newport Dunes Waterfront Resort in Newport Beach on Sunday.

Thousands take in the Newport Dunes Waterfront extravaganza fireworks

The Independence Day fireworks show sponsored by the city of Newport Beach returned with a bang — a spectacular display on Sunday night. The Newport Dunes Waterfront extravaganza with approximately 4,500 attendees began at 9 p.m. It lasted 20 minutes, but preparation took weeks. Without the Newport Beach Fire Department there would be no show. Michael Pasmant, life safety specialist 1 and James Gillespie, fire analyst, were the firemen in charge of the launch of explosives. "It's amazing to be able to have control over an explosive capable of producing such a beautiful spectacle," Pasmant said. The two firemen inspect all things safety throughout the day, such as establishing mortar stability, authenticating California Fire Marshall safety seal, verifying the size of product not to exceed 5 inches and proportion of tubes to shells. And when the show ends, their work continues. "We make sure everything is detonated or properly dispersed of before we allow the crowd to disperse," explained Gillespie. According to operator in charge Craig Cauthen of Pyro Spectaculars, the 592 mortars went off in a sphere shape of 360 degrees, the highest reaching 500 feet and visible for miles. — Susan Hoffman

Ora Sterling said. "It's like we had a little forced vacation, and I was excited to get my booth set up, and opening day, as soon as I heard the music playing, it was like, 'Oh, we're back!' It felt good. It felt really good." Sterling's space featured heart-shaped clay rocks attached to driftwood. It is a project that Sterling won't soon forget because of the company with whom she shares it: her mother, Willoughby Chamberlain, who turns 100 in August. (Chamberlain, incidentally, performed in the first Pageant of the Masters in 1933.) "I take the projects up, and my mother helps me roll balls of clay, and we work together on it," Sterling said. Hedy Buzan, a second-generation Laguna artist, grew up visiting the grounds along Laguna Canyon Road, where her father, Boris, used to show his work.

She first exhibited in the mid-1980s, and celebrates the freedom the festival affords participants. "The great thing about the Sawdust is it's not juried, so you can just make anything you want," said Buzan, who brought to her booth an acrylic, minimalist, abstract painting, various monotypes and "almost cartoon-like" images of Eve. Buzan also showed her appreciation for a donor who wished to remain anonymous. "I had a client send me two $500 checks, and they said, 'We do not want any artwork. Just keep working,'" Buzan said. "It was very nice." Now in its 55th year, Sawdust is also noted for its emphasis on local artists and crafters. The event space, which is truly lined with sawdust, has an only-in-Laguna feel. "It's just a very different and unique vibe, compared to the other art festivals, and I think that's one of things that really distinguishes us is just the look and feel and the overall vibe of the Sawdust," Monica Prado, president of the festival's board of directors, said. "It's hard to find anything to compare it to, and I think that people really wanted to experience that again, and they are, and it shows in the joyfulness of the artists, as well, and their creations." Throughout the grounds on Independence Day, patrons enjoyed live music, shopping and watching artists, including painters and glassblowers, at work. "We wanted to go to the Sawdust Festival, come out on the Fourth of July, celebrate the holiday and enjoy an open-air festival with family," Kayla Linson of Los Angeles said. The festival is open from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays through Thursdays and from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through Sept. 5. Admission is $10 for adults, $7 for seniors and $5 for children 6 to 12. Children under 5 years are free. andrew.turner@latimes.com Twitter: @AndrewTurnerTCN

OLD GLORY BOAT PARADE LETS FREEDOM RING OVER NEWPORT HARBOR

Newport Harbor was bathed in red, white and blue this weekend as the Old Glory Boat Parade set sail to celebrate the Fourth of July.

More than 50 boats were on the water, decked in patriotic memorabilia, to honor this year's theme, "Let Freedom Ring," which American Legion Yacht Club Commodore Bruce Batcheller has said is emblematic of both Independence Day and the state's reemergence from the pandemic.

Retired National Security Advisor H.R. McMaster was parade grand marshal. Prior to working in the Trump administration, McMaster served as a lieutenant Army general.

Last year's theme was "Honoring Our Frontline Heroes."

The parade circles Newport Harbor and is held every Fourth of July.

Also on the case are Drs. George Katcherian of Back Bay Veterinarian Hospital in Newport Beach, Paige Hashimoto of Beach Boulevard Pet Hospital of Huntington Beach, and Elana Young of Banfield Pet Hospital in Santa Ana. "It's going to be months of recovery and rehabilitation — all because of fireworks," McGuire said. "We're hoping for the best. Hopefully she'll be strong enough to make it through the surgery. She's dealing with a lot of stress, not only her pain and shock of what she's gone through but she's also in captivity."

Domesticated animals also are affected.

Nearly one in five lost pets goes missing after being frightened by loud noises, including fireworks, according to a study by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

McGuire said she is trying to raise money for Wetlands and Wildlife Care Center to keep providing veterinary care.
