Erika Ilagan had two special guests of honor following her round in the 24th annual Jones Cup community golf tournament on Wednesday.

Her parents, Conrad and Elen, came out from Westminster to watch her represent Big Canyon Country Club.

Ilagan, a professional, said it had been at least a decade since they had watched her play in a tournament.

New Mr. Irrelevant touches down in Newport

BY ANDREW TURNER

A crowd full of local movers and shakers packed into the Cannery Restaurant on the waterfront of Newport Bay on Monday, but on this night, the view was a close second to the man of the hour.

Those in attendance were there to participate in one of Newport Beach's most outrageous and beloved traditions of the last half century: Celebrating the underdog by honoring the last pick in the NFL draft.

Some surely wanted to dub the eatery a "Rams house" for the evening, as the Lowsman Banquet saw everyone trying to get a glimpse of and perhaps a moment with the Los Angeles Rams' Desjuan Johnson, the newest member of the Mr. Irrelevant family.

Johnson, a defensive lineman out of Toledo, became the 48th player to have the title of Mr. Irrelevant bestowed upon him after being taken with the 259th pick.

Flanked by family, Johnson sat at a round table on an outdoor deck overlooking the calm waters from which he had just arrived by boat. Before long, he was being roasted and toasted by a lineup of speakers.

Newport Beach officials presented Johnson with several gifts by dinner time. Fire Chief Jeff Boyles gave him a stuffed edition of a dalmatian, also known as a fireman's best friend. Police Chief Joseph Cartwright gave him a box of doughnuts, some sprinkled with Rams' colors and others shaped like footballs. And of course, Mayor Noah Blom handed him the key to the city, which, legend has it opens, any lock within the city limits.

Standing next to the 6-foot-3, 252-pound Detroit native, Cartwright prefaced his jokes with, "Remember, we're friends now, OK, so you don't hurt friends," for a bit of lighthearted self-preservation.

"What do the Rams and the post office have in common?" continued Cartwright, who professed that he did not write his jokes. "Neither of them deliver on Sundays."

After the main course, it was time to hear from the football brethren. Four-time Super Bowl champion Jesse Sapolu, an offensive lineman for the San Francisco 49ers, and former Rams kicker Mike Lansford both remarked that they were "more irrelevant" than Johnson, having been taken later in the 11th and 12th round, respectively.

With reverence to the late Paul Salata, who lived by the mantra of "do something nice for someone for no reason," and created the Mr. Irrelevant award, Sapolu offered his own advice to the new Mr. Irrelevant.

"Here's the mindset that I want you to take, and I used that mindset when I felt disrespected,"

Newport Beach curtails public camping

An ad hoc committee tasked to evaluate city's homelessness services provided insight prior to ordinance's approval.

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Camping on public property when shelter beds are available will be prohibited in Newport Beach, following a new policy approved Tuesday by the City Council.

The panel unanimously approved a new ordinance as part of the recommendations it received from an ad hoc committee on June 13. The committee, which was first formed in 2019 and worked on and off over the next few years, was reestablished in March with Mayor Noah Blom and Councilwomen Robyn Grant and Lauren Kleiman. They were tasked with evaluating existing services addressing homelessness in Newport Beach and whether or not additional services might be required.

The approved ordinance prohibits sitting, lying, sleeping or storing of personal effects in areas directly impacting traffic or access to, specifically, cancer treatment centers, colleges, schools, day care centers, businesses, private property, firefighting, facilities,

Edison High principal resigns

The decision was unrelated to reaction to a student-made video celebrating Pride month, the educator said.

BY ERIC LICAS

Edison High School's principal announced her resignation from the position she has held for the past 10 years in a message sent to students, families and staff Wednesday morning, in the wake of controversy stirred by conservative outlets over a student-made video celebrating Pride month.

Jennifer Judge will serve as assistant principal at the Huntington Beach Adult School, the educator wrote in her letter.

In a brief interview Wednesday, Judge told the Daily Pilot she was saddened to leave her role at Edison, but she was also excited to take on new challenges.

"It was such a hard decision to make," Judge said, sounding as though she was choking back

MEMOIR 'ARE YOU KIDDING? A LIFE' TELLS STORY OF 6 TURBULENT DECADES IN 1 GAY MAN'S LIFE PAGE A2

Memoir shares decades of gay man's life

BY SARA CARDINE

Bob May was 70 years old, stuck at home during the pandemic in 2020 and playing card games in an all-gay online forum when one of the younger members — a man in his 20s — posed an intriguing question.

“What’s the big deal with the Beatles?” the man, named Sam, asked the group.

The question surprised May, a Costa Mesa retiree who’d not only loved the Fab Four but considered them a cultural touchstone for those who’d been raised within the strict confines of the 1950s but felt called to something more expansive.

“They were basically the soundtrack of my life,” May, now 73, recalled in an interview Tuesday. “What the Beatles were was different from everything else that had come before that time.”

When pandemic restrictions had receded somewhat, May and his fellow Beatles-loving friend Jim had a socially distanced sit-down with Sam and his friend, Trevor.

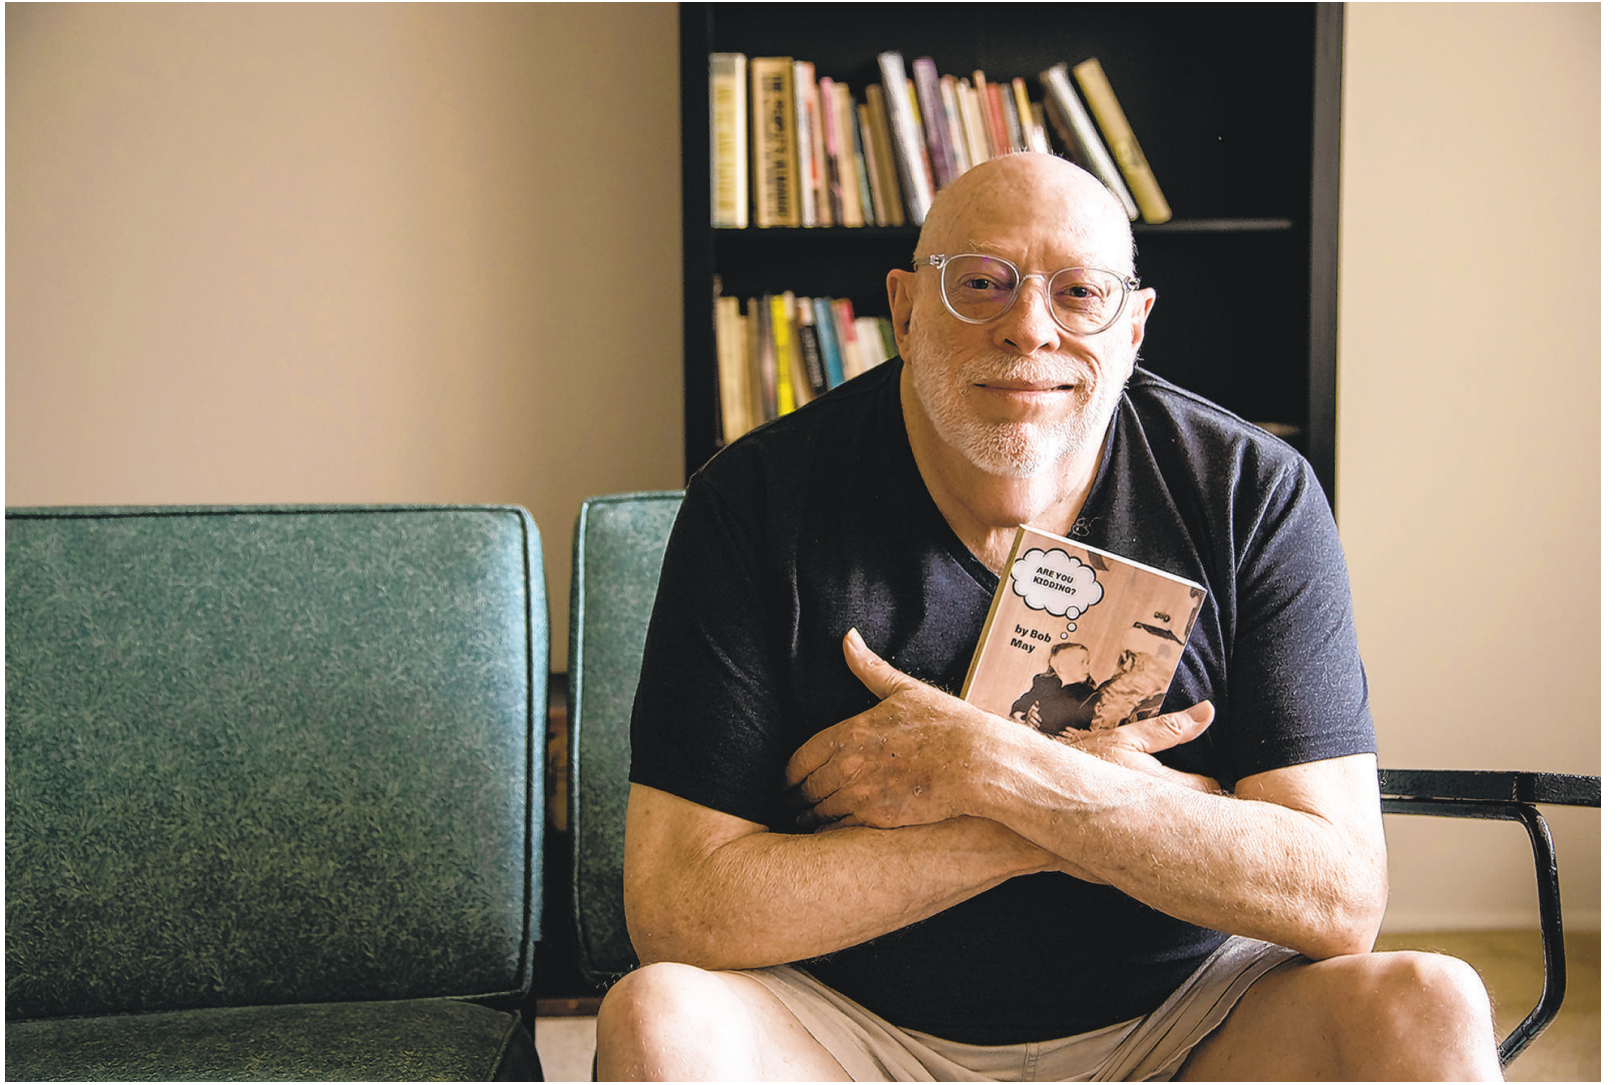

The topic of conversation began with the Beatles but quickly widened to include May’s experiences as a closeted gay youth growing up in conservative Orange County in the 1960s, his being locked out of the house at 18 after his parents accidentally discovered his sexual identity and how he would come to learn via a Red Cross form letter he’d contracted the HIV virus after a blood donation.

“They had very little understanding of what my childhood was like,” he said, adding after each anecdote he shared, his young friends responded with “Are you kidding?”

“All of a sudden I thought, I have a story to tell.”

The pandemic gave May the time and space to reflect on his life in a series of essays that would eventually be transformed into a memoir aptly named “Are You Kidding? A Life.”

Initially submitted to on-demand self-publishing company IngramSpark in 2021, the autobiographical work has since been made into a paperback and e-book format available through Amazon, GoodReads and Barnes & Noble’s online portal.

BOB MAY, 73, holds a copy of his memoir, “Are You Kidding? A Life” at his home in Costa Mesa on Wednesday.

May will make a rare in-person appearance Thursday at 6 p.m. at the Barnes & Noble Bookstore at Huntington Beach’s Bella Terra shopping plaza on Edinger Avenue, where he will read excerpts from the memoir and sign copies for those who attend.

“I’m considering this the long-delayed launch I didn’t have in 2021 because of COVID,” said May, who’s currently making “Are You Kidding?” an audio book. “Now seems to be the right time.”

The book’s 318 pages introduces readers to May, who grew up as the oldest of three siblings in a strict Southern Baptist household where the Lawrence Welk show was on TV every weekend and father Dick was constantly working. May describes his book as “one gay man’s humorous and mind-boggling remembrance of 70 years from Eisenhower to COVID-19” that includes his coming to terms with his sexual identity and pursuing acting while working for the AAA’s Auto Club of Southern California, a career he held for some 35 years.

A self-professed “ham” and unapologetic extrovert, the author writes frankly about the AIDS pandemic, substance abuse and depression and his battle with the long-term side effects of life-saving antiretroviral drugs.

“When this first started, [HIV] was a death sentence,” May recalled of his diagnosis. “There was no therapy, there was no protection or knowledge. All I knew was people around me were dying like flies. I was scared.”

Nonetheless, he continued to work at the Auto Club while seeking acting jobs, chancing into a regular character spot on Gourmet Detective, an interactive murder mystery/comedy show, where he remained for 25 years.

Mack Gilliland, who was heading Garden Grove High School’s drama department in the 1970s when May’s community theater group used the stage to put on a production of “Christmas Carol,” called his friend a wonderful character actor with great gifts and a penchant for bringing magic to the stage.

The pair would meet several years later at an AIDS and HIV-related support group where their friendship blossomed. May eventually invited Gilliland to play piano with Gourmet Detective, a job he held for 10 years.

Today, the old friends describe themselves as Statler and Waldorf, the grumpy old-men Muppet characters who sit in the balcony and heckle the productions below.

“[Bob] is a dear person,” said Gilliland, 81. “He’s such a congenial extrovert, he can talk to anyone about anything and has no hesitations about sharing himself.”

So, it was no surprise when the Diamond Bar resident learned about “Are You Kidding?” He even helped edit some of the chapters. Gilliland said the book paints a portrait of a young man growing up in fear — of homophobia and disapproval, being drafted to serve during wartime, the scourge of AIDS — and overcoming challenges to make a life for himself.

The Beatles, he said, provided a perfect backdrop to all of that.

“The Beatles were always a big thing, because that helped him articulate, to find his authentic self. The song ‘We Can Work It Out,’ especially hit a thread with him. That’s what pop music can do for young people — it can help them find themselves.”

Although his memoir is beginning to gain some traction, May said he doesn’t envision himself as an author. Instead, he sees himself as someone who had a story inside him and wanted to put it out into the world.

“I’m coming to the end of my life, and I think it’s been an interesting life,” he surmised. “I’ve learned a lot, been through a lot and have come out the other side pretty OK, and I think I should share that with others. That’s my story.”

Barnes & Noble at Bella Terra is located at 7881 Edinger Ave. #110, in Huntington Beach. For more on May’s book, visit areyoukiddingalifebybobmay.godaddysites.com.

Motorcyclist dies in H.B. single-vehicle crash

BY ERIC LICAS

A single-vehicle crash in Huntington Beach left a man from Fountain Valley dead early Wednesday morning.

The man who died was riding a white Ducati Monster northbound on Main Street, Huntington Beach police said in a news release. Preliminary evidence suggest he made an “unsafe turning movement” before he and his motorcycle crashed into a tree north of Orange Avenue.

Police were summoned to the area at about 1:30 a.m. They found the motorcyclist lying on the roadway.

He was taken to a hospital and later pronounced dead. He was described as a 33-year-old, and his name was withheld pending the notification of relatives.

The crash is still under investigation. Huntington Beach police asked anyone who might have witnessed it to contact traffic investigator J. Rounds at (714) 536-5666.

Seal Beach police arrest man on suspicion of child abuse

BY LILLY NGUYEN

A Seal Beach man pleaded not guilty Monday to charges of child abuse and attempting to evade arrest by leading police on a pursuit that ended in Los Alamitos on Thursday.

Authorities responded to a welfare check for a young child without parents or guardians in the area of Heather Street and Guava Avenue in Seal Beach at 3:37 p.m. on June 22. After officers located the 4-year-old child, they identified visible injuries on the child’s face and body and proceeded to call paramedics to transport the child to a local hospital.

As paramedics evaluated the child’s injuries, police said the alleged abuser was seen driving in the neighborhood.

Officers attempted to make a traffic stop when the driver allegedly fled in his vehicle and led police on a chase through Garden Grove toward the northbound 405 Freeway. The chase was terminated after authorities could not determine his exact whereabouts.

The suspect, Cody Rohlfling, 25, was later involved in a traffic collision in Los Alamitos. He allegedly attempted to flee on foot from the scene, but was brought into custody with the assistance of Los Alamitos and Cypress police officers, and a Huntington Beach police helicopter.

Rohlfling, who is not biologically related to the child but lives with the child’s mother, has been charged with felony child abuse and endangerment, evading a peace officer and reckless driving, failure to stop at a traffic accident resulting in injury or death and a misdemeanor charge of resisting a public or police officer.

Rohlfling is expected to next appear in court at the West Justice Center in Westminster on July 6. He is being held without bail, according to jail records.

The child was transported to a local hospital for their injuries and Child Protective Services was contacted. Seal Beach police said this is an ongoing investigation and anyone with information is encouraged to reach out to Sgt. Jeff Gibson at (562) 799-4100 ext. 1128 or jgibson@sealbeachca.gov.

Sapolu told Johnson. “You know, we talk about the legacy of Paul Salata wanting to do something nice for somebody for no apparent reason. I want you to make people pay. Every defensive lineman that you come across in camp, make them pay for no apparent reason.”

While Sapolu advised Johnson that all he needed was an opportunity to make the team, he didn’t miss his chance to take a dig at a new NFC West division rival. Sapolu said, “Rookies are allowed to make two mistakes a year,” and the crowd guffawed when he made it clear he wouldn’t mind if those miscues came in the weeks the Rams play the 49ers.

San Francisco quarterback Brock Purdy, who was last year’s Mr. Irrelevant before leading the 49ers to the NFC championship game, sent in a video welcoming Johnson to the club. Former Rams quarterback Vince Ferragamo also presented him with a Rams watch.

Tim Mead was honored with the Paul Salata “Hero Beyond the Hashmarks” award for contributions in the community. The Orange County Youth Sports Foundation was the primary beneficiary from the fundraiser.

Irrelevant Week reached its end on Tuesday. Johnson visited the Newport Beach junior lifeguards program, before heading over to Angel Stadium, where he witnessed a two-home run, 10-strikeout performance by Shohei Ohtani.

The weekend was not without its own highlights. On Friday, Johnson went to Disneyland, clad in a jersey shirt with his last name above the number 259 on the back, as well as a set of Mickey Mouse ears with the name “Mr. Irrelevant” inscribed.

On Saturday, a few dozen people were on hand at 30th Street beach to see Johnson’s first attempt at surfing. His uncle, Roland Stegar, got up on the board first, but Australian surfer Peter “PT” Townend ultimately graded them very closely.

“First thing is he’s never even been in the Pacific Ocean,” Townend said of the difficulty in getting up on a surfboard. “That challenge alone, to even jump in the water and even just walking out. ... It’s only like 2 feet today, but even when a 2-foot wave hits you, you realize the power of the ocean.”

“For the first-time experience, for him to go out there, he got one, a pretty decent one. That’s an accomplishment right there in itself. It takes years. ... For them to get to their feet on the first day in the Pacific Ocean is a pretty serious accomplishment.”

Johnson said he felt he got better and better with each pass at the waves.

Throughout the week, Johnson expressed how thrilled he was to share it with his family.

“Everything’s been the best,” Johnson said after getting out of the water. “I can’t pick and choose one. Everything’s been the best, as far as my family coming out here and just spending time with me, spending some quality time with my family. That’s one of the best things that I was looking forward to, just seeing smiles on everybody’s faces.”

Asked about the toughest part of surfing, Stegar’s focus was on soaking up the beauty of the Newport coastline.

“The hardest part is understanding that I’m going to have to leave,” Stegar said. “That’s the hardest part. It’s the reality of it all, but I’m going to enjoy every single second. I was walking the beach at 5 o’clock this morning, taking in all the beauty, the sun, the seashells on the shore, the seagulls, the smell of the ocean, just taking in all this beauty.”

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800) 683-2468 or visit this Internet Web site www.servicelinkasap.com, using the file number assigned to this case C.377-550. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. For sales conducted after January 1, 2021: NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (800) 683-2468, or visit this internet website www.servicelinkasap.com, using the file number assigned to this case C.377-550 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. public restrooms and bike paths.

It also prohibits unpermitted physical structures, regardless of shelter bedspace; camping on public property using camping gear without permission from the city; fires in unpermitted areas; lodging in public restrooms; usage of public fountains, drinking faucets, restroom sinks and sprinklers to wash dishes, clothes or bathe; leaving personal property unattended on public property; and injuring public property.

The city currently has a contract with Be Well OC, collaborates with nonprofit CityNet, and partners with the city of Costa Mesa in its homeless shelter. According to recent data collected by the city, there were about 41 unsheltered individuals in the city of Newport Beach in May.

"This is not something that's happened in the last couple of days, weeks or months. This has been a process of years and years. These recommendations that came out of the ad hoc committee are a culmination of a lot of efforts within the city and we have the same frustrations that everyone [attending the meeting] does right now," Blom said. "Our goal right now is to find the best, most proactive way to help those that are out there while ensuring the quality of life that we're all looking for."

Kleiman said of the proposed measures. "In no way are we trying to shuck our responsibility to provide assistance as evidenced by the procurement of additional shelter beds and our partnerships with BeWell, CityNet and Costa Mesa."

Residents were overwhelmingly in support of the ordinance. Many of those commenting Tuesday night were emphatic that they wanted to help unsheltered people off of the streets, but that they also wanted other citizens and tourists to safely enjoy public amenities such as the Balboa Pier and Newport Pier.

"Based on recent court decisions, the city's municipal code provisions needed updating," City Atty. Aaron Harp said Wednesday. "This is especially true for regulations that protect public access and ensure sanitary conditions are maintained. The proposed ordinance is designed to align the city's regulations with the guidance that has been provided by the courts over the last few years."

Harp said the city does not expect a challenge to the new ordinance, which comes on the heels of a memorandum with the city of Costa Mesa and will expand shelter beds for Newport from 20 to 25. Five other beds meant for Costa Mesa could also potentially be allocated to Newport if they aren't in immediate use.

A second reading of the ordinance will come at the next City Council meeting on July 11 and the policy will be in effect about 30 days thereafter, according to Harp.

tears Wednesday. "I'm definitely going to miss all of the kids, my staff and everyone who was a part of the Charger family. I'm from this community, and it was an honor and a pleasure to serve it."

The move was unrelated to the reaction of some parents and conservative outlets to a student-made video celebrating Pride month, Judge said. A recorded exchange posted to social media involving students expressing displeasure while watching it and a teacher who threatens to punish them for acting out drew a firestorm of attention, as well as comments from local and county officials.

"That [incident] had nothing to do with it," Judge said of her transfer to a new position.

The video in question is a brief clip featured in an episode of Edison High's Bolt TV. At times, it depicts LGBTQ+ couples holding hands or touching their foreheads together. But it does not explicitly feature kissing or graphically sexual content.

"At Edison, we should make all students feel welcome here, no matter gender or sexual orientation," the video's narrator says over footage of LGBTQ+ students. "So if you are out and proud, closeted or even just an ally, be proud of who you are. Most importantly, don't forget to love each other. Happy Pride month."

Some parents, along with a collection of TV and internet pundits, found the video obscene and took issue with the fact that students were threatened with punishment for expressing disapproval with it. They accused school officials of attempting to push a progressive agenda on youth.

"Rather than listen to his students, the teacher threatened them with supervision and to give them detention the following year," Huntington Beach Mayor Pro Tem Gracey Van Der Mark said during public comments at a Huntington Beach Union High School District school board meeting on June 13. "At no time was the teacher concerned with the students' visceral reaction as they watched video clips of couples in intimate positions and poses. In my opinion, it was not the students being inappropriate."

That meeting took place the night before fliers demonizing both the LGBTQ+ and Jewish communities were found on lawns and on the street in a neighborhood less than a mile away from Edison High School.

In response to that apparent hate speech, three liberal members of the Huntington Beach City Council brought forth a resolution specifically denouncing antisemitism, white supremacy and anti-LGBTQ+ hate. But during a June 22 meeting, Mayor Tony Strickland proposed a substitute motion, expanding the item to reference hate against Catholics, Christians, Black people, Latinos, Asians, Pacific Islanders, Native Americans, Indians,

EDISON HIGH principal Jennifer Judge announced her resignation Wednesday.

Persians, Muslims, Hindus, Buddhists, Mormons and white people.

"I want to make it clear that there's more hate out there," Strickland said during the meeting. "Huntington Beach welcomes everybody."

Inclusiveness was ostensibly why the conservative majority of the City Council voted earlier this year to stop flying the Pride flag at public buildings in June. Supporters of the move said it was in the interest of fairness, because current law prohibits the city from displaying non-governmental flags.

The Orange County Board of Supervisors made a similar decision on Tuesday, June 6, based on essentially the same reasoning. It's unclear if any municipality in Orange County has ever been cited for breaking laws prohibiting the display of non-governmental flags.

FOR THE RECORD

Wednesday's story "Huntington Beach City Council passes 2023-24 fiscal year budget, avoids library closures" incorrectly stated that a revised budget was presented to residents at Monday night's meeting. The budget document itself was unchanged, but the supplemental document titled "Budget Balancing Plan" was revised. Also, in the June 25 edition, the article "A beacon for spiritual seekers," gave the incorrect name for sound bath practitioner Terry Silberstein.

and able to watch and enjoy the afternoon," she said. "That was pretty special."

Her parents watched her turn into a hero as the day unfolded.

Ilgan sank birdie putts on the final two holes, including a 25-footer on No. 18, to help Big Canyon edge host Newport Beach Country Club for the championship.

Big Canyon finished at 17-under-par in the two best ball format, a stroke better than Newport Beach. It is the tournament-best 11th Jones Cup title for Big Canyon, the first since 2018.

Ilgan earned the inaugural Gordon Bowley Celebration Award for the tournament MVP, named after the longtime Jones Cup volunteer who died earlier this year. Golfers also wore "GB" pins in Bowley's honor.

Bowley would have enjoyed Big Canyon's heroics on the final hole. Ladies champion Olivia Slutzky also made a shorter birdie putt of about six feet on No. 18 to help secure the title.

"We all pushed each other, just to be comfortable and let it go," Ilgan said. "Put your best roll on it and see what happens, that's really all you can do. The whole team just did that throughout the whole afternoon. It was fun to see everyone get into that zone and hit quality shots."

Mesa Verde Country Club finished third at -11, followed by Shady Canyon in fourth at -9. Defending champion Santa Ana finished fifth at -6.

Ilgan had five birdies for Big Canyon, which tied for the team lead with senior men's champion Will Tipton. Men's champion Jordan Nasser and Slutzky each had three birdies, and team captain Robert Pang added two.

Pang said he was on cloud nine after the victory, giving a big hug to Nasser. He said Nasser is one of his best friends, and was on the USC men's golf team when Pang was an assistant professional at Los Angeles Country Club.

"It was a total team effort, just super, super fun," said Pang, who won the Jones Cup for the seventh time overall. "We enjoyed the walk in the park today. The energy was good, the teamwork was good. Wow. How do you actually put it into words what fun we just had? What a way to enjoy five-and-a-half hours."

The back nine turned into a battle between Big Canyon and Newport Beach. The host club, which teed off last, got birdies by professional Andy Alderdice and senior men's champion Todd Roberts on par-three No. 17 to take a one-stroke lead.

But Big Canyon, the group directly in front of Newport Beach, responded with the two birdies on No. 18 to take back the lead. They then watched as Newport Beach missed birdie putts on the final hole, at least one of which it needed to make to force a playoff.

Newport Beach men's champion Blair Walsh, a former kicker in the NFL, saw his final putt veer just wide of the hole.

"I liked the read and it's kind of right edge," Walsh said. "I hit a similar putt in the club championship to win it, so I thought it had the same type of movement, but it really didn't ... Being competitive in a different sport was fun. I'm used to having a lot more people watch me, though. An NFL crowd is a different feeling than it is having people watching you play golf."

Team captain Robin Shelton and ladies champion AiLam Newkirk also contributed for Newport Beach, with Newkirk recording an eagle on the par-five No. 5. Alderdice and Roberts had four birdies each.

Professional Mike Fergin made a team-best five birdies for third-place Mesa Verde, including two on the first two holes.
