Locals come surging back to the reopened O.C. Fair

BY SARA CARDINE

Hours before the gates rolled open Friday morning, Orange County residents awoke with an undeniable feeling of anticipation — after nearly two years and the long arc of a global pandemic, the Orange County Fair was finally back in town.

By 10 a.m., the clowns were makeup ready. Ponies queued in a ring, awaiting the light burden of child riders. Turkey legs were turned with loving care. Farm animals nestled in beds of fresh hay. All that was missing were the people.

Outside the gates, a small crowd of fairgoers who'd ordered their tickets online in advance (one of several coronavirus precautions adopted this year in consultation with the Orange County Health Care Agency) lined up to get a first crack at the spectacle.

"We woke up and realized we were way too early, so we lingered around the house," said Orange resident Bethany Tumbleson, who came with husband Mike, 11-year-old son Dylan and daughter Emma, 9.

"Normally, the line is around the corner, but it's

F.V.'s Mile Square Regional Park to have 93 acres of land repurposed

BY MATT SZABO

Mile Square Regional Park in Fountain Valley will soon lose one of its three golf courses, but is set to gain 93 acres of recreation space.

The Orange County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday voted unanimously to certify the final environmental impact report for the project, which would repurpose land in the middle of the 640-acre park.

According to the conceptual master plan, new features would include a botanical garden, a great meadow open area for concerts or events, an amphitheater, a nature camp and visitor center, several ponds and parking.

1st District Supervisor Andrew Do, who represents the area of Fountain Valley where Mile Square Regional Park is located, has been involved with the project's planning since it started in 2018.

Do said there is a lack of open space in his district, particularly in Westminster and Santa Ana, two cities that about Mile Square Regional Park, and that the population density is high.

"There's a lack of a safe, healthy living environment for people, but particularly young people,

Teaching e-bike safety a joint effort of Laguna city, school and police officials

BY ANDREW TURNER

The Laguna Beach City Council and the Laguna Beach Unified School District held a joint meeting Thursday, and among the topics discussed was the emerging popularity of e-bikes in town.

The mutual point of interest came up as interim Laguna Beach Police Chief Jeff Calvert gave a report on the activity of school resource officers, noting that e-bike education and safety was discussed in a community forum with parents in May. Calvert said that about 40 parents attended the forum, and he said e-bike safety will again be covered when the police department offers its next road safety expo.

"We've seen [e-bike riders] going too fast, the wrong way [and without] helmets," Laguna Beach Mayor Bob Whalen said. "It really is concerning to

Laguna Beach places ban on single-use plastics on beaches, parks and trails

As part of the city's Neighborhood and Environmental Protection Plan, Laguna Beach has adopted an ordinance that addresses plastic pollution.

The ordinance, which took effect on Thursday, bans single-use plastic food ware items in the city's beaches, parks and trails.

The sale, use or distribution of single-use, to-go plastics such as straws, drink stirrers, eating utensils and take-out bags made from such material is also prohibited.

The city urges local food and beverage vendors to use reusable materials when possible. Restaurants are asked not to provide nonplastic alternatives like paper straws unless a customer requests them.

A food vendor may receive a one-year exemption from the ban on plastic food service ware if it can show that the conditions of the ordinance would cause undue hardship.

In addition, the following took effect on Thursday as part of the environmental protection plan: the feeding of birds is prohibited in the city's parks, large shade structures are not allowed on beaches to preserve public safety sightlines, bikes cannot be left alone at Main Beach or Heisler Park and community parks that aren't located on the coast close at 10 p.m.

Festival of Arts introduces app

The Festival of Arts has debuted a free smartphone app, allowing attendees to plan their visit to the venue currently playing host to the Festival of Arts Fine Art Show and the Pageant of the Masters.

ple," Do said in an interview Friday.

"When I became a supervisor, I looked at Mile Square Park as more than just a park. I see it as a resource for the 1st District. Of course, back then, we had the constraint of having leased out almost 300 acres for three 18-hole golf courses."

One of two courses at Mile Square Golf Course, which is on the Warner Avenue side of the park, will be eliminated. David L. Baker Golf Course, which operates on the north side of the park bordering Edinger Avenue, will be unaffected.

"There will be multiple phases to this project, because of the enormity of it," Do said. "From the different amenities you can see in the plan, it will take a lot of planning...but to have such a facility in such a densely populated area is invaluable to our residents."

Orange County Parks Department spokeswoman Marisa O'Neil said in an email that Phase I of six phases will begin this year, and is partially funded through a California Department of Parks and Recreation grant.

OC Parks will apply for additional grants as they become available, and it is not anticipated that general fund dollars will need to be used.

At this early stage and with unknown timing for phases, the full development cost has yet to be projected, O'Neil said.

OC Parks held two community outreach events in 2019, a workshop and an open house. It also collected input through surveys at different events.

Not everyone in the community is happy with the changes, however.

Fountain Valley City Councilwoman Kim Constantine said she is "not thrilled" at the land uses in the conceptual master plan. She said she would like to have recreational uses such as more soccer fields, or a dog park, included in the 93-acre re-vamping.

"It's not like I'm saying, 'Let's take the 93 acres and put some buildings, or take away the park area,'" Constantine said. "Absolutely not...I just think we can do better. I love the idea of a dog park. You're still talking fresh air. Small and medium dogs in one area would be great, and larger dogs in another."

Things got contentious at the Board of Supervisors meeting as Supervisor Katrina Foley, whose 2nd District also includes part of Fountain Valley, attempted to initiate a presentation about the park's conceptual master plan.

She said she had been getting calls and emails from Fountain Valley City Council members and residents, seeking clarification on elements of the master plan.

But her efforts eventually were shut down by Do and 3rd District Supervisor Don Wagner. Do mentioned that illustrations on the plan were in an attachment to the agenda item, albeit starting on page 1,356 of a 1,394-page document.

"I don't know why we need to go over every detail of the plan," Do said to Foley. "Please be respectful of the meeting here."

Foley said in a phone interview Friday that she didn't know why her actions caused such a commotion.

"In my experience, when you have a master plan for a park, usually there's a staff presentation so that the community has eyes on what's being voted on," she said.

"Not everybody has a copy of the agenda and can look in a 1,400-page document to find the conceptual plan... I believe in transparency. I support the project, so I don't know why that was a concern. It's baffling."

Do said that the purpose of the meeting was to vote on items, not to go into details and presentations on each item.

"We want to make our meetings accessible, and we want to be able to tee up projects and issues that we vote on," he said. "But I think to go further and make it kind of a show-and-tell type of process, I think that's improper use of board meetings."

Newport adopts amendment for federal grant program

BY LILLY NGUYEN

The Newport Beach City Council on Tuesday amended its action plan for the upcoming year to identify activities and projects that prevent, prepare or respond to COVID-19 that will be funded by the federal community development block grant program.

Community development director Seimone Jurjis said the block grant program was intended to be used for prevention of COVID-19 and support of those affected by the coronavirus.

The city received an additional $741,079 from the CARES Act by way of the federal block grant, according to a staff report.

About $24,000 of that will be allocated to administration, Jurjis said.

The remaining money will be put toward public services.

The amendment is required to notify the federal department of housing and urban development as to how the funds will be allocated for eligible projects and activities under the requirements of the CARES Act.

The city initially received $210,324 in the first round of funding, which was allocated to an economic development program to assist small businesses affected by COVID-19.

The amendment Tuesday was unanimously approved. Councilman Duffy Duffield was absent from the meeting.

In other business, the council rescinded a resolution and adopted a new one in its place regarding the Washington Street refuse bins in Balboa Village.

The new resolution identifies eligible businesses to use the bin enclosure on Washington Street and East Bay Avenue by their property addresses as opposed to listing users by their business names.

It also establishes a fee to be paid by the property owner for use.

The City Council also approved this action. Mayor Pro Tem Kevin Muldoon was the lone dissenter on the vote.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. FAIR not like that today.”

That was by design, according to fair organizers, who’ve capped daily attendance at 45,000 to provide guests room to maintain safe distances. Mask-wearing, urged for unvaccinated visitors while indoors, will be left to an honor code system.

Two queues down, mom Brittany Hollar stood with 9-year-old-son Brady after having dropped off older son Jameson at the fairgrounds to perform as part of a youth act. As with the Tumbletons, Friday morning found the Los Alamitos family chomping at the bit.

“We got our tickets like three weeks ago, and we woke up this morning at 7:15,” Hollar said. “Once we dropped off Jameson, we just drove around in circles until the parking lots opened up at 9:15.”

With a brief countdown and a welcoming call, the gates swung open. It was “Time for Fun,” a fitting theme for this year’s event, which runs through Aug. 15. Inside, OC Fair & Event Center Chief Executive Michele Richards passed out multicolored paper fans to keep fairgoers cool.

Like guests, she too, was filled with excitement for the day ahead.

“I woke up at 3 o’ clock this morning — I couldn’t sleep,” Richards said, chagrined that the cancellation of the 2020 O.C. Fair, the first since World War II, happened on her watch.

“It’s almost like I’ve been holding my breath for the last 15 months,” she continued. “Now, it’s like we’re exhaling today, in the best and happiest way.”

Among the first throngs of people to rush headlong into the waiting fairgrounds were Alyssa Sanchez, her new husband, Christian, and her two sisters Nadine and Victoria Alvarado.

They made the trip from Los Angeles because the L.A. County Fair was canceled this year and the family wanted to get in one last hurrah before the newlyweds moved out of state.

“We’re moving to Texas next week, so we wanted to see a California fair one more time with my sisters,” Alyssa Sanchez said outside the fairgrounds’ Centennial Farm.

Having applied coats of sunscreen, the group went to look at the farm animals before scoping out some deep-fried Oreos and checking in on the schedule for the “All-Alaskan Racing Pigs,” a favorite attraction.

Inside Centennial Farms, small children posed for pictures with Patches, a beemoth black and white ox in the process of having his white spots brightened with “Yellow Out” shampoo with some help from volunteer David Hauk, who explained to visitors oxen are simply bulls who take up the yoke.

Missing the O.C. Fair in 2020 was not only difficult for the countless families who’ve attended as long as their memories can reach, but for the many volunteers who work on the fairgrounds as well.

Just ask Fountain Valley resident Cheri Wall. The retiree started volunteering with husband Buck, who passed before the pandemic, to have something to do. That was 18 years ago.

“When I came back to the orientation last week, I just broke into tears,” she said. “It was like seeing family.”

For Costa Mesa residents Diane McCardle and Donna Yelich — two sisters who grew up in town and have faithfully attended for nearly a half-century — the fair is all about family.

“We always, always, always come on the first day,” McCardle said. “We usually come once a week, bring the grandkids, ride the rides, see everything. We love everything about it — the pig races, the food, everything.”

Friday morning found the duo peering over table setting displays inside the Anaheim Building, where lavishly themed displays and clever concept dinner menus had them recollecting over the many competitions they and other family members had entered over the years.

McCardle said it’s become a family tradition that has so far spanned four generations.

“Our mother, she entered artwork,” she recalled. “My son, who’s in his early 50s now, entered multiple times in all different areas, and his three children and his wife have all entered.”

“I did a table setting, it must have been 20 years ago,” Yelich chimed in. “I got first place for that, and I still have the centerpiece.”

Torrance resident Rich Hung, who grew up in Huntington Beach and attended the fair as a child, saw Friday an opportunity to create new family traditions with wife Kristen and 2-year-old daughter Aubrey, a first timer.

“My dad brought me to the O.C. Fair when I was her age,” he said. “I really wanted to bring her here, so when I heard it was opening, we jumped right on it.”

THE LAGUNA BEACH City Council and Laguna Beach Unified School District held a joint meeting Thursday about the safety, education, and enforcement of operating e-bikes.

all of us.” Laguna Beach school board member James Kelly asked if traffic tickets were being issued as a deterrent to those who did not follow the rules of the road.

Previously, city officials had said the effort to keep e-bike use safe in town primarily focused on educating the public. It remains a focus, but police has also begun enforcement, Calvert said.

“This is not just a police department problem,” Calvert said. “This is a parenting problem, and we need to work collaboratively to make sure that the kids are safe in town, but I’ve given direction to my officers to start enforcement.

“Right now, I can’t tell you how many tickets we’ve written, but our officers are out there actively looking for violations, and they’re going to start writing citations to the kids.”

Civic and educational leaders in Laguna Beach agree that the effort to look after the safety of children who commute on e-bikes will be a collaborative one as the education process continues.

“This is going to be a team effort to be able to ensure the safety of our students, and I really appreciate the work that our [school resource officers] have done in that area,” District Supt. Dr. Jason Vilorio said.

“It just really frustrates me watching our students ride down the hill from Thurston [Middle School] with a helmet on, but not strapped, and those are the little things that you just cringe at thinking, ‘Just strap it and you’ll be that much safer.’ Those are things that will come with education.”

School board member

Kelly Osborne said she believes that citations curtail behavior not only for the individual who is cited, but for those around them, too. “I did hear of some enforcement, ... right around commencement, word was out on the street that young teens were getting ticketed, and it circulates like wildfire,” Osborne said in remarks following Kelly’s question.

“That’s very effective, as well. When your friends get a ticket, it makes you less likely to do something with poor judgment.”

THE CROWD

launched Irrelevant Week some 50 NFL drafts ago as a way to celebrate and recognize the underdog. His lifelong motivation has always been to lend a hand to the people in need, not just in football, but in life.

Salata’s daughter, Melanie Salata Fitch, carries on the legacy today running the show, which is no small operation. The weeklong Irrelevant celebration in Newport Beach is packed with events, culminating in the Lowman Banquet with proceeds earmarked for charity. The 2021 beneficiaries were R.M. Pyles Boy’s Camp and Costa Mesa’s Serving People In Need (SPIN).

The big night unfolded June 28 at Ron Salisbury’s Cannery Restaurant in Newport Beach. Salisbury, patriarch of the El Cholo Family dining dynasty, generously hosted the dinner evening welcoming more than 200 guests from the worlds of sports, business, government and philanthropy in the region.

“My dad always said that football gave him a leg up in life and the ability to make a little money and start a business. He wanted to pay this forward to others and that has been the simple message all these years behind the Mr. Irrelevant story,” Fitch said.

Sports broadcaster John Ireland joined Fitch co-emceeding the night roasting Stuard, who with his beautiful new wife Josie, impressed the crowd with his intelligent, serious, presence and stature. Ireland commented, “Big things are in front of you. We can all tell you have what it takes. We’ll be watching the Tampa Bay Buccaneers closely to celebrate your progress.”

Our very own literary round table leader behind the well-known Newport writer’s salon, Barbara DeMarco-Barrett, debuts her latest book “Palm Springs Noir.” Her work joins a collection of stories crafted by accomplished local writers including T. Jefferson Parker, Janet Fitch, Ken Layne, J.D. Horn, Alex Espinoza, Rob Roberge, Eric Beetner, Kelly Shire, Michael Craft, Rob Bowman, Tod Goldberg and Chris J. Bahnsen.

The book debuted July 6. “The best noir writers make us feel the heat of the sun, the touch of a lover. Setting can be gritty but can also be sublime, no longer relegated to urban locales and seedy hotel rooms but also mansions and swimming pools” DeMarco-Barrett said.

“Hence, Palm Springs, which may seem like an odd setting for a collection of dark short stories — it’s so sunny and bright here. The quality of light is unlike anywhere else, and with an average of 300 sunny days a year, what could go wrong?”

Published by Akashic Books, “Palm Springs Noir” is available online and in stores now.

The state of California recently directed a spotlight on the Toast Kitchen + Bakery in Costa Mesa. Assemblywoman Cottie Petrie-Norris (74th district) honored the local establishment joining Costa Mesa Mayor John Stephens in recognizing their contribution to the community over the pandemic year.

“This restaurant not only has delicious food but also is an incredible member of the Orange County community,” Petrie-Norris said. “During the pandemic, the owners donated meals to those hit hardest and strive to hire youth that have been formerly homeless, have struggled with addiction or have been incarcerated.”
