PARENTS AND students rally outside the Huntington Beach City School District on Tuesday to protest the district's delayed reopening plans.

Some H.B. City School District parents upset as classrooms remain closed

The hybrid learning plan has children going back to school on Oct. 26, at the earliest. Nearby districts are reopening next week.

BY MATT SZABO

How soon is too soon when it comes to children returning to in-person instruction during the coronavirus pandemic?

That depends on who you ask.

About 75 parents and students attended a rally to reopen schools in front of the Huntington Beach City School District office on Tuesday, prior to a special board meeting.

Many parents in attendance said they were frustrated that the board of trustees voted unanimously on Sept. 8 that students would return to school for hybrid instruction no earlier than Oct. 26.

That timeline is much later than neighboring districts. Fountain Valley School District students returned to campus Tuesday, while elementary-age students in the Ocean View and Newport-Mesa Unified school districts are set to return on Monday and Tuesday, respectively, also in a hybrid format.

Orange County gave every school the green light on Tuesday to reopen classrooms.

RADFORD BROWN,

5, places a sign in front of the doors at the Huntington Beach City School District. The posters were left for board members who met Tuesday night.

April Helliwell, one of the rally organizers, is the PTSA president at Hawes Elementary School. Her two sons attend Hawes.

"The community is completely in the dark, and it's reached a point where we are now uninformed and frustrated," Helliwell said.

"We're still sitting here with no information and we're looking at Oct. 26. Everyone has questions about why is it still Oct. 26, and if it is Oct. 26, what is the reason? I think a lot of people are saying they think the reason is because the district didn't do anything for six months ... There has just been a lot of mistrust and a loss of faith in the district. People have just had enough."

Boardwalk safety stirs debate by council

Newport officials discuss enforcement, signage and possible ban of electric vehicles on the path.

BY LILLY NGUYEN

Safety on Newport Beach's Balboa Peninsula boardwalk isn't a new issue.

Not by a mile, or by the nearly 3 miles that the boardwalk runs along the Balboa Peninsula between 36th Street to E Street. The issue of safety on the boardwalk is a long-standing issue, with residents raising concerns about speeding, unsafe conduct and, now, the proliferation of electric bicycles and other motorized vehicles.

The issue returned before the Newport Beach City Council during a Feb. 11 study session earlier this year, with many of the concerns focused on speeding.

Up for discussion Tuesday night was adoption of an ordinance to add additional language to define electric bicycles, electrically motorized boards and motorized transportation devices at-large and an increase of the maximum fines for violations from $50 to $200.

City staff also sought direction from the City Council on whether or not it should bring back restrictions or a ban on motorized transportation devices on the boardwalk, which includes e-bikes.

The fastest class of e-bikes is already prohibited from the narrow path, along with surreys, motorized scooters and skateboards, but like cycle surreys, electric bikes are available for renting at Newport's many tourist-serving seaside bike shops.

City staff reviewed current signage and regulatory measures already implemented such as the replacement of old signs and radar speed feedback signs, which inform passers-by of how fast they're going.

Still pending projects are revision of text-based signs to symbol-styled signs and the addition of speed-calming devices such as rumble strips, which are currently undergoing a pilot program at three locations along the Castaways Park trail until the end of the year. The speed limit on the boardwalk is 8 mph.

Councilwoman Diane Dixon, whose district includes the Balboa Peninsula, said the issue pre-dated her arrival on council. Dixon was elected to the City Council in 2014 and said that boardwalk safety has been the "number one issue" in all her town hall meetings, an issue, she said, has been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Laguna council approves plan for remodel of Coast Liquor and a new café

BY ANDREW TURNER

A remodel of the Coast Liquor store and a cottage next door that housed athletes from the 1932 Olympic Games was at the center of a discussion during the Laguna Beach City Council meeting on Tuesday night.

After extensive consideration, council members approved 4-1 a modified plan to turn the liquor store into a multitenant building. The Planning Commission had reviewed the project in July and unanimously recommended council approval.

It is the second project submitted by Chris Dornin, the president of the Dornin Investment Group, approved by council members in recent months, after a remodel of Coast Inn received approval in July.

Coast Liquor is at 1391 South Coast Highway and 168 Mountain Road. The plan would include a 1,485-square-foot coffee shop at the corner of the highway and a 1,220-square-foot liquor store. An outdoor dining area was also part of the proposal.

The motion carried by the council calls for the restoration of the liquor store, including installation of a rooftop sign with black letters spelling out the word 'beverages.' Council members debated the color of the building, ultimately deciding it will be red in keeping with how it was originally built.

Among the modifications to the proposal, council members did not go along with the plan to have a lower-level retail storage area turned into an office, believing it would intensify use.

Mayor Bob Whalen said he couldn't go along with the offices down below, but he thought the liquor store and the café could be beneficial to the community.

"I think the café use is going to be a great local amenity for this neighborhood," Whalen said. "I think it's coastal visitor serving."

Councilman Peter Blake said he felt that the community was going to get better with the new additions.

"I see this incredibly vibrant corner that's going to end up serving locals because the hip district is a local district, and this café is going to become an ancillary service to the locals that live in that community and the people that are in that hotel," Blake said.

Councilwoman Sue Kempf noted that residents living near Coast Liquor may find it nice to have an option for food and refreshment within walking distance.

"I don't think people are going

Former Huntington Beach High boys' basketball coach Elmer Combs dies

BY ANDREW TURNER

Former Huntington Beach High School boys' basketball coach Elmer Combs has died.

Combs, 91, died of natural causes on Sunday, his daughter Terri said.

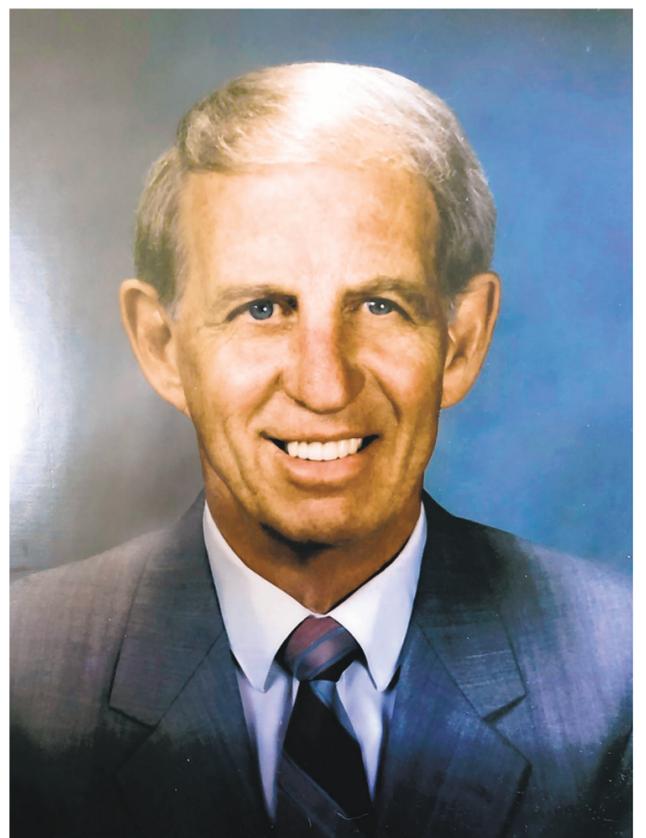

Over the span of 19 seasons from 1958 to 1977, Combs accrued 328 wins with the Oilers. Roy Miller, who played for Combs and later succeeded him as coach, said that Combs is the winningest coach in program history.

Huntington Beach won eight league titles with Combs manning the bench.

Miller was a 6-foot-2 center for an Oilers squad that reached a CIF final against Compton in 1968. That Compton team had several college-bound basketball players and an Olympic high jumper in Reynaldo Brown. Huntington Beach lost the game 64-52 at the Long Beach Arena.

Under Combs, the Oilers also won an incredible 44 consecutive league games. Miller remembers how the streak got started.

"The very first league game of the 1967 season, we lost to Estancia in three overtimes, and obviously, that didn't sit well with us, so we went on to have 44 straight league victories after that," Miller said, adding that the run went on to be the Orange County record for league wins in a row for some time afterward. "I [was a] sophomore. After I lost that league game to Estancia in triple overtime, I never lost a league game after that in my remaining three years." Combs' teams may not have been the biggest, but what they lacked in size, they made up for in grit. Miller said that it was Combs' ability to demand and get more out of his players that he took from his former coach when he took the reins. With Huntington Beach experiencing great success under Combs, and Marina being coached by Lute Olson at the same time, Miller said that the crosstown rivalry was something to behold. The late Olson went on to become the winningest coach for the University of Arizona men's basketball program. "We did a couple of times lose to them in tournaments, but we never lost to them in league in the three years that I played," Miller said. "Lute Olson was there for those, so it was a tremendous rivalry. As a matter of fact, if you didn't get into that gym by the first quarter of the JV game, you didn't get in. It was insane, and it's hard to explain to people nowadays." Combs and Miller, who would succeed his former coach as head coach of the Oilers from 1978 to 2000, had a special bond. Both were physical education instructors and each served as athletic director at the school. Both also played college basketball, Combs at USC and Miller at Long Beach State. Terri Combs said that her father was best known for his humor and his humility. She added that he was organized and a decent man who never swore at home. As a coach, Combs left an indelible mark on his family, as all of his kids inherited his work ethic. "Something that is super important that he passed on to all of his kids was his work ethic," Terri

Combs said. "He worked hard his entire life, and he passed that on to us because we're all really hard workers, too, always made our own way, never asked for help, and that was because of him. He taught us that." Terri Combs said that the family is considering a celebration of life for her father in the spring. The plans are tentative because of the coronavirus pandemic. to be driving into town and go to the Coast Liquor, but people living in that area are going to walk over there and have coffee and sit outside," Kempf said. "Sitting outside has gotten hugely popular in our town, and I'd kind of like to see the tables and stuff out on the sidewalk. That's kind of the way we're going now." Whether or not to light the sign was another contested point. Councilwoman Toni Iseman, the lone dissenter, pointed to wanting to keep Laguna Beach skies dark, something that was not lost among some of the public commenters. "Dark skies has been important, I think, for Laguna for a long time, and we have a sign ordinance that, thanks to previous council members, has distinguished Laguna from all the other coastal towns," Iseman said. "All you have to do is drive through at night and go, 'What is it about Laguna that makes this better?' It's the fact that we were in control of the lighting and the signs." Council members had been invited to express their views on the sign. Iseman had begun by mentioning that she lived in the neighborhood where the project is to take place when a male voice interjected and said the word "bitch." Multiple council members reacted to the profane language, and when the discussion of the item was brought to a close, Iseman requested that the incident be recorded in the minutes and that she planned to identify the person. "I don't know if there are any legal consequences we can impose," Whalen said. "It's going to be obviously rather embarrassing, and I think somebody ought to be offering an apology." andrew.turner@latimes.com Twitter: @ProfessorTurner

“The reason we’re sitting here tonight and we have a room full of people and letters having been written is that people are violating these fundamental laws of our city with impunity, cavalierly and with impunity,” Dixon said, adding that she wanted the City Council to find a solution by the end of the night.

Conversation on Tuesday focused chiefly on speeding and a lack of enforcement as the central crux of the issue, with opponents of a potential e-bike ban saying that electric bicycles shouldn’t be singled out when manual bikes could reach similar speeds. Those speeding should be held accountable, but not good operators.

Some residents recommended the possibility of expanding the boardwalk to create a separate lane for bicyclists, while others stressed clarifying the signs and for greater enforcement.

Councilman Kevin Muldoon said that while he understands safety on the boardwalk is a serious problem, he felt that police resources were better used elsewhere. Muldoon said he felt the best way to handle the issue was by imposing physical barriers or deterrents. Dixon agreed that enforcement could not be the only solution to the speeding issue, but added that she felt the issue was largely seasonal.

The City Council voted to adopt the ordinance to amend the language in the current ordinance to state that no users of the boardwalk can exceed the 8-mph speed limit, as proposed by Mayor Will O’Neill, and to increase the maximum fines. Muldoon dissented.

Dixon, along with Mayor Pro Tem Brad Avery and council members Joy Brenner and Jeff Herdman, directed staff to bring back a potential ordinance mandating pedestrians only on weekends from Memorial Day to Labor Day weekends. Staff was also directed to look at other cities and countries on how issues of speeding are dealt with and for staff to return with information on the pilot program at Castaways Park trail. The City Council also voted to lift a hold on a capital improvement project meant for the boardwalk that had been tabled to the 2021-22 fiscal year out of concern for budget shortfalls as a result of the pandemic.

During the board meeting, Magnuson provided a short update on the transition from Phase 1 (distance learning) to Phase 2 (hybrid learning). He said the district currently has a substantial inventory of PPE supplies on-site, including 34,000 disposable adult face masks, 10,900 disposable children's face masks, 4,000 bottles of hand sanitizer, 2,400 face shields, 11,000 cloth student face masks and 4,400 cloth adult face masks. He said school offices have been outfitted with plexiglass barriers.

Magnuson said an additional $1 million has been earmarked for PPE and custodial services.

Magnuson said more details concerning safety in Phase 2 would be provided by Oct. 6. Having that time will allow the district to work out glitches in the distance learning program and consider different hybrid programs including an "AM/PM" model, where kids come on campus in the morning or afternoon, he said.

"You [the board of trustees] asked us to learn from other districts, and that's what we're doing in this period," he said. "We're in consultation with no less than a half-dozen school districts on what they're doing."

Magnuson wrote in an email Wednesday that the decision to bring back Huntington Beach City School District students no earlier than Oct. 26 "reflects an abundance of caution for the health and safety of students and staff."

"The board was mindful of the local post-Memorial Day increases in COVID cases, and in their discussion expressed concern about a potential post-Labor Day COVID increase that would be disruptive to school reopening," Magnuson wrote in the email. "Additionally, the board expressed a keen interest to support high quality student instruction, including time to successfully implement our Phase 1 distance learning model before transitioning to the Phase 2 hybrid model."

The Orange County Health Care Agency on Wednesday reported 26 new deaths due to COVID-19, bringing the county's death toll to 1,176.

Of the deaths reported Wednesday, six were skilled nursing facility residents, two were assisted living facility residents and 18 were residents not living in a facility.

Overall, there were 156 new positive tests reported Wednesday, leaving Orange County at 52,538 cumulative cases. Of those cases, an estimated 47,367 people have recovered.

Jennifer Shea, who has three sons who are students at either Hawes Elementary or Sowers Middle School, attended Tuesday's rally. While some chanted, "No more Zoom, open the room!" Shea held up a sign that read, "It's OK to cheat on this one. Copy Fountain Valley's plan."

"My kids are definitely suffering," Shea said. "The teachers are wonderful, but my kids are getting physically sick, getting headaches being on Zoom for so long. If they're allowed to go back safely, why haven't we? It's just the frustration of not having any clarity."

HBCSD board members uniformly said during their board meeting closing remarks that they understood parents' frustration.

"I also feel that same frustration at the speed at which things are taking place," board member Diana Marks said.

"But what I do know is that the staff has been working 24-7 to get where we are today. It has taken a lot of work, and I know people like to compare us to other districts, but we do have a smaller staff than other districts do."

Board Vice President Bridget Kaub said that communication was important, even to the point of overcommunicating, when more information was available.

"If we can have a very comprehensive answer to so many of these questions that continue to be posed on [Oct. 6], I think that will alleviate a lot of these questions and stress," she said.

Protesters left their signs at the doorstep of the district building, to be found by board members as they left the building. Helliwell said her desire was that the signs would not be needed again.

"I hope that we don't have to be out here again, and that our kids will be safe in class sooner rather than later," she said. "If [Fountain Valley] can go back, and they're right next door, why are we not prepared?"

Some parents may not be willing to wait. Gina Clayton-Tarvin, president of the Ocean View School District board of trustees, said in a text message that several parents have contacted her to help transfer their kids out of HBCSD and into OVSD.

"We have obliged, as we believe in school choice," she said.

Myrtle Yoshioka Asahino

April 14, 1933 - September 11, 2020

On September 11, 2020, Myrtle Yoshioka Asahino, loving wife, mother and grandmother, passed away at the age of 87. The third of five children born to Masato and Shige Yoshioka in Kaunakakai on the Friendly Isle of Molokai, Myrtle spent a happy childhood on the rustic Hawaiian island, with fond memories of eating peanuts and "talking story" with friends and siblings on the town's pier. To help supplement her father's income as the butcher in Misaki's Store, she would sometimes work in the pineapple fields, preferring to be outdoors rather than working indoors as a seamstress.

Myrtle was very independent. Against the strong advice from her father, she left home and family at the age of 14 for the bright lights of Honolulu, with the understanding that greater opportunities existed in the big city. She attended McKinley High School, then graduated from the University of Hawaii in 1955 with a degree in Home Economics with a concentration in Dietary Institutional Management, all the while supporting herself on a tight budget.

Soon after graduation, her big adventure began. She moved to Boston and proudly worked at the renowned Massachusetts General Hospital as a hospital dietician. The big eastern city was such a spectacular delight for the tropical island girl. Actually watching Ted Williams play at Fenway Park instead of listening about it through the static of the radio was astonishing.

The adventure continued on to St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago. Through mutual friends, she met the love of her life, Steve Asahino, an orthodontics student at Loyola Dental School. The two were married at the University of Chicago in 1959 and soon got busy building a home and family. They moved to Newport Beach in 1960 because it was reminiscent of their beloved native Hawaii, and because Dr. Asahino understood the growing area was an ideal location to start his orthodontics practice. Before long, they had four children: Steven, Karen, Kathryn, and Kenny. They found the time to explore the world together, travelling throughout the U.S., Europe, Hong Kong, and Japan, where Dr. Asahino helped introduce orthodontics to his ancestral home.

Myrtle's generous Aloha spirit was infectious, and she made friends far and wide. Many are blessed to be in her Ohana. Her philanthropic work at Bowers Museum through MEDELLAS with other Asian American women brought out the best of her fundraising skills. She was active in Cal State Fullerton's Oral History program, recognizing the importance of preserving stories from the Issei, first generation pioneers who settled in the LA and Orange County area.

Mostly though, she loved a good party. Their home was often filled with the Hui Aikane (a close group of island transplants) and a wide group of other friends, bringing tasty potluck dishes, ukuleles, and raising the spirit of Aloha.

When Dr. Asahino unexpectedly passed away in 1985, her large Ohana became all the more important to Myrtle. She was a charter member of "The Walkers," a group of fellow lady volunteers from the 1984 Olympics who can still be seen to this day walking the early morning streets of Dover Shores and solving the world's problems. Her family grew with the arrival of her grandchildren Paul, Cole, Malia, Claire, Eliza, and Nuala. She was a loving and nurturing grandmother, being an integral positive influence in each of their lives. Their kind and generous hearts are Myrtle's legacy.

Myrtle's generous spirit and positive outlook knew no limits. When she was given lemons, she would literally make a delicious lemon meringue pie and return it as a gift. She couldn't stand to see anyone lonely. If she knew a remote acquaintance who would be alone during the holidays, she would invite them over for one of her famous Christmas parties. She was always quick to laugh, and to make us laugh with her unique insights and good humor. We were blessed with her charming smile up until the very end.

We are saddened to see her pass, but comforted knowing she is reunited with her departed loved ones. The angels and the saints are going to love her lemon meringue pie.

Myrtle is survived by brother Isamu (Ruth) Yoshioka, sisters Janet Nagasako and Cherry (Jerry) Kobashigawa; children Steven, Karen (Dan) Selleck, Kathryn (Rich) Tait, and Kenny (Catherine); grandchildren Paul Selleck, Cole Tait, Claire Selleck, Malia Asahino, Eliza Tait, and Nuala Asahino; plus numerous nieces and nephews. She is preceded in death by parents Masato and Shige Yoshioka, beloved husband Steve Asahino, and sister Misao "Sue" Rivera. Her life will be honored with a private grave side ceremony. Once restrictions are lifted, Myrtle's life will be celebrated with a large party, as she would have liked.
