X. As you may know, California now has an open or ‘blanket’ primary. However, only the votes of members of the Democratic or Republican parties count for choosing the presidential nominees of those parties. Do you think:

- Everyone’s vote should count whether they belong to their candidate’s party or not, or
- Only Democrats’ votes should count for choosing the Democratic party’s nominee, and only Republicans’ votes should count for choosing the Republican nominee?

HOW THE POLL WAS CONDUCTED

This Los Angeles Times poll is one of a series of surveys undertaken to sample the opinions of voters as they participate in key elections. This particular exit poll was conducted during the California open primary.

The sampling frame for this exit poll is all voters in the state. Four thousand one hundred six voters were interviewed on March 7, 2000, as they left 75 polling places across the state. The sample included 1,707 Democratic and 1,468 Republican voters. Precincts were chosen based on the pattern of turnout in past statewide elections. The survey was a self-administered confidential questionnaire and was offered in English, Spanish, Chinese, Korean and Vietnamese. Interviews at the precinct level were conducted by Davis Research of Calabasas, California.

The entire sample of primary election voters has a margin of error of two percentage points. For some subgroups the error margin may be somewhat higher. Because the survey does not include absentee voters or those who declined to participate when approached, actual returns and demographic estimates by the interviewers were used to slightly adjust the sample. In addition, surveys of this kind may be subject to errors not associated with sampling methods but resulting instead from the practical difficulties involved in conducting any survey of public opinion.

Susan Pinkus directs the Los Angeles Times Poll under the general supervision of Karen Wada, managing editor/projects. Jill Darling Richardson and Elizabeth Armet are the assistant directors, Roger Richardson is the field director, Claudia Vaughn is the data management supervisor and Ray Enslow is the publications coordinator.
